

One Day In The Life Of Ivan Denisovich

Quotes

Aleksandr Solzhenitsyn's novel "One Day in the Life of Ivan Denisovich" highlights the harsh conditions for life in the Soviet prisoner camps. An inseparable part of the camp life, described by Solzhenitsyn, is work. Work plays a major role in the life of every prisoner, as it helps him to keep warm, earn his daily ration and survive. For those who have lost all hope of gaining freedom, work is more than just a daily routine, for it is a path to liberty, both personal and spiritual.

For prisoners like Ivan Denisovich Shukhov work no longer represents enslavement or punishment but instead a gift of life and fortune. When Shukhov is given three days penalty with work, he is not put down, as the narrator uses his voice to note: "With work that wasn't half so bad. Real lock up was when you were kept back from work". Shukhov understands that if he is kept back from work, he will have to spend the day in a cold camp, with very little food. Therefore, he considers that the work he does is worth the reward that might save his life and help him go on for another day. This is important, as in the small and limited society that the prisoners live in, there are goals and rewards, that keep the life power in the heart of every one of them.

Shukhov Ivan Denisovich

The protagonist of the novel sees work as freedom and a dimension where one can fulfill his purpose and prove his worth. Shukhov considers work as a place where one can show his capabilities, and is therefore particularly fond of people such as Alyosha the Baptist, as he notes: "You could count on Alyosha. Did whatever was asked of him." (p.88) Shukhov's respects Alyosha, because the latter is devoted to work and never hesitates to help a friend.

This tells of his personal qualities and worth within a team and as an individual in whole, as he is a person who can be counted on and trusted. This plays a major role in the camp, as Shukhov notes: "Who is the enemy of the zek? Another zek". People like Alyosha earn the respect and trust of those around them by being a valuable part of the team that struggles all day for a better treatment. Therefore, work not provides the prisoners with food and warmth, but also allows them to differ from hundreds of other prisoners, assessed by their abilities and qualities.

Shukhov shows that one is responsible for taking control over his life, and doing his best at it. When the work time arrives, a prisoner can work not only for the authorities, but also for himself by achieving the goals set for the day, and showing his worth in life. Shukhov himself has a tendency to perfect his work, as he notes: "Hasty work is scamped work" (p. 89). This shows how devoted Shukhov is to the one of the few goals that he sets for himself, taking the responsibility for a part of his everyday routine. His refusal to give in to an oppressive system, and his ability to set achievable everyday goals helps him preserve his id
