Developing an Intercultural Responsive Leadership Style for Faculty and Administrators Spicer-Runnels, Ashley D., Simpson, Teresa E., 2020-06-26 College student populations are becoming increasingly more diverse as students from diverse backgrounds have greater access to higher education Additionally governing bodies have heightened expectations related to student success retention and time to degree thus holding institutions of higher education more accountable With a changing student demographic and increased accountability measures faculty and administrators are seeking effective strategies to enhance intercultural responsiveness among underrepresented populations to support their success Developing an Intercultural Responsive Leadership Style for Faculty and Administrators is a critical research publication that examines student retention and success among underrepresented college student populations by analyzing factors impacting their persistence towards graduation as well as exploring strategies to enhance intercultural responsiveness among these populations Featuring a wide range of topics such as diversity intercultural fluency STEM education and lifelong learning this book is ideal for administrators faculty academicians policymakers researchers and students H.R. 2183, Minority Serving Institution Digital and Wireless Technology Opportunity Act of 2003 United States. Congress. House. Committee on Science. Subcommittee on Research, 2003 Institutional Diversity in American Postsecondary Education Tiffany J. Davis, Shelley Price-Williams, Pietro A. Sasso, 2024-07-01 The glossy and polished college videos view books and websites catered to the marketplace of students Some recruitment brochures often discuss famous alumni athletics championships and a vibrant student life Particularly at research universities marketing materials may even focus on entrepreneurs and medical discoveries These types of colleges along with others compromise the marketplace of higher education in which different types of colleges exist across a spectrum of missions institutional sagas and histories Within this marketplace is a bewildering and disorienting catalog of different institutional types and classifications This marketplace also exists within a conglomerate of rankings and ratings that are ordered by US News World Report and Petersons Such rankings are often connected to a larger quest for prestige and primarily facilitated by these private sector publications but are juxtaposed to the higher education industry created Carnegie Classification system The Carnegie Classification system was created as an approach to differentiate the more than 4 000 institutions by size mission and scope for research and policy analysis However this system is also integrated into broader hierarchies of accreditation and funding However the continued reclassification of the system in 2005 2010 and the addition of new categories in 2018 such as doctoral professional has advanced to call attention to and emphasize the importance of the considerable institutional diversity of U S higher education 2005 p 52 However these typologies do not fully describe or conceptualize the organizational administrative culture or student experiences of each of these typologies The rankings guides and the Carnegie Classification systems often overlook more nuanced institutional types such as faith based or works colleges They also overlook the role and impact of Minority Serving

Institutions MSI This lack of recognition often facilitates continued invisibility for different institutional types and the diverse multiple student populations they may educate and support Therefore this edited text seeks to expand and further the Carnegie Classification system typology and beyond the private sector rankings This text is a response to a call for existential exploration as an attempt to critically revivify our understanding of the various institutional types and is inspired by the words of David Thorton Moore in which it might be heartening to see a cadre of faculty and critical scholars facilitate a form of discourse in which teachers and students conduct an unfettered investigation of social institutions power relations and value commitment In this text the authors describe and problematize the various institutional types as defined by accreditation Carnegie classification and private sector rankings College Access and Opportunity Guide 2011 ,

Figueroa,2023-07-03 Latino males are effectively vanishing from the American higher education pipeline Even as the number of Latinas os attending college has actually increased steadily over the last few decades the proportional representation of Latino males continues to slide relative to their Latina female counterparts The question of why Latino males are losing ground in accessing higher education relative to their peers is an important and complex one and it lies at the heart of this book There are several broad themes highlighted catalogued along with the four dimensions of policy theory research and practice The contributors to this book present new research on factors that inhibit or promote Latino success in both four year institutions and community colleges in order to inform both policy and practice They explore the social cultural factors peer dynamics and labor force demands that may be perpetuating the growing gender gap and consider what lessons can be learned from research on the success of Latinas This book also closely examines key practices that enable first generation Latino male undergraduates to succeed which may seem counterintuitive to institutional expectations and preconceived notions of student behavior Using narrative data the book also explores the role of family in persistence outlines how Latino men conceptualize fulfilling expectations negotiate the emasculation of the educational process and how they confront racialization in the pursuit of a higher education uncovers attitudes to help seeking that are detrimental to their success and analyzes how those who succeed and progress in college apply their social capital whether aspirational navigational social linguistic familial or resistant While uncovering the lack of awareness at all levels of our colleges and universities about the depth and severity of the challenges facing Latino males this book provides the foundation for rethinking policy challenges leaders to institutionalize male focused programs and services and presents data to inform needed changes in practice for outreach and retention Digital Solidarity in Education Mary T.
