Three Streams Philip J. Ivanhoe, 2016-09-15 Recent interest in Confucianism has a tendency to suffer from essentialism and idealism manifested in a variety of ways One example is to think of Confucianism in terms of the views attributed to one representative of the tradition such as Kongzi Confucius 551 479 BCE or Mengzi Mencius 372 289 BCE or one school or strand of the tradition most often the strand or tradition associated with Mengzi or in the later tradition that formed around the commentaries and interpretation of Zhu Xi 1130 1200 Another such tendency is to think of Confucianism in terms of its manifestations in only one country this is almost always China for the obvious reasons that China is one of the most powerful and influential states in the world today A third tendency is to present Confucianism in terms of only one period or moment in the tradition for example among ethical and political philosophers pre Qin Confucianism usually taken to be the writings attributed to Kongzi Mengzi and if we are lucky Xunzi 479 221 BCE often is taken as Confucianism These and other forms of essentialism and idealism have led to a widespread and deeply entrenched impression that Confucianism is thoroughly homogenous and monolithic these often are facts mustered to support the purportedly oppressive authoritarian and constricted nature of the tradition such impressions can be found throughout East Asia and dominate in the West This is quite deplorable for it gives us no genuine sense of the creatively rich philosophically powerful highly variegated and still very much open ended nature of the Confucian tradition This volume addresses this misconstrual and misrepresentation of Confucianism by presenting a philosophically critical account of different Confucian thinkers and schools across place China Korea and Japan and time the 10th to 19th centuries
