African Women Writers and the Politics of Gender Sadia Zulfiqar, 2016-09-23 This work examines the work of a group of African women writers who have emerged over the last forty years While figures such as Chinua Achebe Ben Okri and Wole Soyinka are likely to be the chief focus of discussions of African writing female authors have been at the forefront of fictional interrogations of identity formation and history In the work of authors such as Mariama B Senegal Buchi Emecheta Nigeria Chimamanda Ngozi Adichie Nigeria Tsitsi Dangarembga Zimbabwe and Leila Aboulela Sudan there is a clear attempt to subvert the tradition of male writing where the female characters are often relegated to the margins of the culture and confined to the domestic private sphere This body of work has already generated a significant number of critical responses including readings that draw on gender politics and colonialism but it is still very much a minor literature and most mainstream western feminism has not sufficiently processed it The purpose of this book is three fold First it draws together some of the most important and influential African women writers of the post war period and looks at their work separately and together in terms of a series of themes and issues including marriage family polygamy religion childhood and education Second it demonstrates how African literature produced by women writers is explicitly and polemically engaged with urgent political issues that have both local and global resonance the veil Islamophobia and a distinctively African brand of feminist critique Third it revisits Fredric Jameson's claim that all third world texts are national allegories and considers these novels by African women in relation to Jameson's claim arguing that their work has complicated Jameson's assumptions

Granny Midwives and Black Women Writers Valerie Lee, 1996 Midwives women healers and root workers have been central figures in the African American folk traditions Particularly in Black communities in the rural south these women served vital social cultural and political functions It was believed that they possessed magical powers they negotiated the barrier between life and death and were often regarded as the knower in a community Today even as medical science has discredited or superseded their power granny midwives have resurfaced as pivotal characters in the narratives of contemporary African American literature GrannyMidwives and Black Women Writersexamines the lives of realgranny midwives and other healers through oral narratives ethnographic research and documentation and considers them in tandem with their fictional counterparts in the work of Toni Morrison Gloria Naylor Alice Walker and others

Emotions in Muslim Hausa Women's Fiction Umma Aliyu Musa,2019-03-07 This book examines the emotions expressed in Hausa women s prose fiction in northern Nigeria showing how Hausa Muslim women writers use fiction in their indigenous language to demonstrate and express their anger about the problems they face in a patriarchal society Umma Aliyu Musa shows how Hausa women authors use literature as a subversive instrument to voice their anger and draw attention to their plight and what they perceive to be unfair traditional authority in a male dominated society Their stories about women protagonists who rebel against existing traditional structures enable women readers to understand the anger experienced by other women who have gone through similar situations Issues at the heart of these women s narratives include forced marriage polygyny family honor and the effects of love The authors use of metaphorical expressions of anger particularly those registered through body parts provides insight into Hausa women s thoughts culture and socialization within their private spheres Thus writing by these women in the Hausa language creates an effective communication network that offers insight into domestic ecology as it affects women Emotions in Muslim Hausa Women s Fiction will be of interest to scholars and students of African literature postcolonial literature gender studies in African society womanism emotions and indigenous African fiction studies
