Unbecoming Mothers
Diana Gustafson, 2013-10-08 Learn the who what and why of unbecoming a mother In a society where becoming a mother is naturalized unbecoming a mother the process of coming to live apart from biological children is regarded as unnatural improper or even contemptible Few mothers are more stigmatized than those who are perceived as having given up surrendered or abandoned their birth children Unbecoming Mothers The Social Production of Maternal Absence examines this phenomenon within the social and historical context of parenting in Canada Australia Britain and the United States with critical observations from social workers policymakers and historians This unique book offers insights from the perspectives of children on the outside looking in and the lived experiences of women on the inside looking out Unbecoming Mothers The Social Production of Maternal Absence explores how gender race class and other social agents affect the ways women negotiate their lives apart from their children and how they attempt to recreate their identities and family structures An interdisciplinary international collection of academics community workers and mothers draws upon sources as diverse as archival records a therapist s interview a dance script and the class presentation of a student to offer refreshing insights on maternal absence that are innovative accessible and inspiring Unbecoming Mothers examines five assumptions about maternal absence and the families that emerge from that absence the focus on parenting as highly gendered caring work done by women the idea that women share the same experience of unbecoming mothers and share the same circumstances and background the perception of maternal absence as a recent phenomenon the notion that women who want to manage their mother work will make choices to overcome life's obstacles the Western concept of womanhood being achieved through motherhood and the unrealistic ideal of the good mother Unbecoming Mothers The Social Production of Maternal Absence is a rich multidisciplinary resource for academics working in women's studies psychology sociology history and any health related fields and for policymakers social workers and other community workers We Find Ourselves in Other People's Stories Amy E. Robillard, 2018-12-07 We Find Ourselves in Other People's Stories On Narrative Collapse and a Lifetime Search for Story is a collection of five essays that dissolves the boundary between personal writing and academic writing a longstanding binary construct in the discipline of composition and writing studies in order to examine the rhetorical effects of narrative collapse on the stories we tell about ourselves and others Taken together the essays theorize the relationships between language and violence between narrative and dementia between genre and certainty and between writing and life

Forget "Having It All" Amy Westervelt, 2018-11-13 A clear eyed look at the history of American ideas about motherhood how those ideas have impacted all women whether they have kids or not and how to fix the inequality that exists as a result After filing a story only two hours after giving birth and then getting straight back to full time work the next morning journalist Amy Westervelt had a revelation America might claim to revere motherhood but it treats women who have children like crap From inadequate maternity leave to gender based double standards emotional labor to the motherhood penalty wage gap racist devaluing of some mothers and overvaluing of others and our tendency to consider women's value only in terms of their reproductive capacity Westervelt became determined to understand how we got here and how the promise of having it all ever even became a thing when it was so far from reality for American women In Forget Having It All Westervelt traces the roots of our modern expectations of mothers and motherhood back to extremist ideas held by the first Puritans who attempted to colonize America and examines how those ideals shifted or didn't through every generation since Using this historical backdrop Westervelt draws out what we should replicate from our past bringing back home economics for example this time with an emphasis on gender balanced labor in the home and what we must begin anew as we overhaul American motherhood including taking a more intersectional view of motherhood thinking deeply about the ways in which capitalism influences our views on reproduction and incorporating working fathers into discussions about work life balance In looking for inspiration elsewhere in the world Westervelt turned not to Scandinavia where every work life balance story inevitably ends up but to Japan where politicians in an increasingly desperate effort to increase the country's birth rates sound familiar tried to apply Scandinavian style policies atop a capitalist democracy not unlike America's only to find that policy can't do much in the absence of cultural shift Ultimately Westervelt presents a measured historically rooted and research backed call for workplace policies cultural norms and personal attitudes about motherhood that will radically
