Mismanagement Of Marine Fisheries:

Mismanagement of Marine Fisheries Alan R. Longhurst, 2014-05-14 A critique of the central assumption that marine ecosystems produce surplus fish that can be taken by commercial fishing Mismanagement of Marine Fisheries Alan Longhurst, 2010-04-22 Longhurst examines the proposition central to fisheries science that a fishery creates its own natural resource by the compensatory growth it induces in the fish and that this is sustainable His novel analysis of the reproductive ecology of bony fish of cooler seas offers some support for this but a review of fisheries past and present confirms that sustainability is rarely achieved The relatively open structure and strong variability of marine ecosystems is discussed in relation to the reliability of resources used by the industrial level fishing that became globalised during the 20th century This was associated with an extraordinary lack of regulation in most seas and a widespread avoidance of regulation where it did exist Sustained fisheries can only be expected where social conditions permit strict regulation and where politicians have no personal interest in outcomes despite current enthusiasm for ecosystem based approaches or for transferable property rights

The Use of CITES for Commercially-exploited Fish Species Solène Guggisberg, 2015-12-11 This book examines the legality adequacy and efficacy of using the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species of Wild Fauna and Flora CITES for commercially exploited fish species and assesses whether the existing institutional cooperation with the Food and Agriculture Organization FAO and regional fisheries management organizations RFMOs is efficient This case study also provides an interesting lens to approaching wider international law issues Indeed finding ways to achieve effective governance of transboundary or global natural resources is central to the peaceful use of oceans and land Furthermore the role of science in advising decision makers is a sensitive issue which deserves scrutiny and is similar in many regimes Finally the complex problem of fragmentation of international law is acute in various fields of environmental law as in all rapidly developing areas of international regulations Billion-Dollar Fish Kevin M. Bailey, 2013-05-15 Alaska pollock is everywhere If you're eating fish but you don't know what kind it is it's almost certainly pollock Prized for its generic fish taste pollock masquerades as crab meat in California rolls and seafood salads and it feeds millions as fish sticks in school cafeterias and Filet O Fish sandwiches at McDonald's That ubiquity has made pollock the most lucrative fish harvest in America the fishery in the United States alone has an annual value of over one billion dollars But even as the money rolls in pollock is in trouble in the last few years the pollock population has declined by more than half and some scientists are predicting the fishery's eventual collapse In Billion Dollar Fish Kevin M Bailey combines his years of firsthand pollock research with a remarkable talent for storytelling to offer the first natural history of Alaska pollock Crucial to understanding the pollock fishery he shows is recognizing what aspects of its natural history make pollock so very desirable to fish while at the same time making it resilient yet highly vulnerable to overfishing Bailey delves into the science politics and economics surrounding Alaska pollock in the Bering Sea detailing the development of the fishery the various political machinations that have led to its current management and perhaps most important its impending demise He approaches his subject from multiple angles bringing in the perspectives of fishermen politicians environmentalists and biologists and drawing on revealing interviews with players who range from Greenpeace activists to fishing industry lawyers Seamlessly weaving the biology and ecology of pollock with the history and politics of the fishery as well as Bailey's own often raucous tales about life at sea Billion Dollar Fish is a book for every person interested in the troubled relationship between fish and humans from the depths of the sea to the dinner plate

Quentin Grafton, 2010-01-21 This handbook is the most comprehensive and interdisciplinary work on marine conservation and fisheries management ever compiled Its many valuable contributions offer a way forward to both understanding and resolving the multifaceted problems facing the world's oceans Departments of Commerce, Justice, State, the judiciary, and related agencies appropriations for fiscal year 1988 United States. Congress. Senate. Committee on Commerce, 1975 Evolving Property Rights in Marine Fisheries Donald Leal, 2005 This book examines the development of property rights in marine fisheries and asks whether the obstacles to their continued development cannot be more easily overcome. The contributed chapters generally focus on the consequences of a lack of property rights of commercial and small time fishers globally. National governments have recognized that the absence of such rights coupled with the technological advances in commercial fishing have resulted in widespread economic and environmental problems e.g. overfishing, bycatching, highgrading, increased physical dangers and lower profits. The most significant solution to these problems and the predominate concern of this book is the institution of Individual Transferable Quotas (ITQs) also known as Individual Fishing Quotas (IFQs). These are national and global policies, public and private sector managed allocations of the amount of various species of fish at certain qualities can be harvested at particular times by fishers. Emergency Marine Fisheries Protection Act of 1975, Hearings Before ..., 94-1... United States. Congress. Senate. Committee on Commerce, 1975. Toxicology in the Use, Misuse, and Abuse of Food, Drugs, and Chemicals P.L. Chambers, S. Gitter, C.M. Chambers, 2012-12-06. Many chemotherapeutic agents introduced for use in humans are carcinogenic in laboratory animals. Conklin et al 1965, Shimkin et al 1966, Griswold et al 1968, Harris 1976. However, initially their beneficial effect in disseminated cancer was of such short duration that the inevitable death of the patient from his primary disease precluded any clinical manifestation of the carcinogenic potential. During the last decade, chemotherapy has radically changed the outlook for many patients with cancer. Combinations of drugs administered as the primary treatment have resulted in high rates of cure in patients with disseminated malignancies such as stage IV Hodgkin's disease or childhood acute lymphocytic leukemia. In other disseminated forms of neoplasia, induction of a remission, a substantial palliation and a prolongation of survival have been achieved. In many instances of localized disease where surgery with or without radiotherapy are the primary form of treatment, anticancer drugs have been used with success as adjuvant therapy for distant microscopic disease. With these spectacular achievements, secondary malignancies, in particular acute non-lymphocytic leukemia (ANLL), has become of major concern. Incidence: Acute leukemia is the most frequent form of secondary neoplasia in patients treated for cancer. Penn 1981. In one large series, 5.9% of all ANLL could be attributed to previous chemotherapy. Kapadia et al 1980.
