Defensive Relativism Frederick Cowell,2022-10-25

Defensive Relativism describes how governments around the world use cultural relativism in legal argument to oppose international human rights law Defensive relativist arguments appear in international courts at the committees established by human rights treaties and at the United Nations Human Rights Council The aim of defensive relativist arguments is to exempt a state from having to apply international human rights law or to stop international human rights law evolving because it would interfere with cultural traditions the state deems important It is an everyday occurrence in international human rights law and defensive relativist arguments can be used by various types of states The end goal of defensive relativism is to allow a state to appear human rights compliant while at the same time not implementing international human rights law Drawing on a range of materials such as state reports on the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination Against Women CEDAW and cases from the European Court of Human Rights involving freedom of religion this book provides a definitive survey of defensive relativism Crucially Frederick Cowell argues defensive relativism is not about alternative practices of human rights law or debates about the origins or legitimacy of human rights as a concept Defensive relativism is instead a variety of tactical argument used by states to justify ignoring international human rights law Yet as Cowell concludes defensive relativism can't be removed from the law as it is a reflection of unresolved tensions about the nature of what it means for rights to be universal
