ABSTRACT

The development of a measure of parental stress, the Parental Stress Scale, is presented. All participants (total  $N = 1276$ ) completed the Parental Stress Scale and some also completed the Parenting Stress Index, a generic measure of stress called the Perceived Stress Scale, relevant measures of emotions and role satisfaction (e.g. loneliness, marital satisfaction, guilt, etc.), and one group completed the Parental Stress Scale twice. Analyses suggested that the Parental Stress Scale is highly reliable, both internally and over time, and related to the general measure of stress. Also, results were consistent across parents of differing parental characteristics, suggesting the stability of scale characteristics. The validity of Parental Stress Scale scores was supported by predicted correlations with measures of relevant emotions and role satisfaction and significant discrimination between mothers of children in treatment for emotional/behavioral problems and developmental disabilities vs mothers of children not receiving treatment. Finally, a factor analysis suggested that a 4-factor structure underlies responses to the Parental Stress Scale, despite its high internal reliability.

Research indicates that vulnerability to stress has important implications for adjustment and well-being and recent evidence emphasizes the uniqueness of stress responses to individuals and specific stressors (cf. Lazarus & Folkman, 1984). In this regard, the measurement of parental stress has received limited attention. Although some general stress inventories (e.g. Kanner et al., 1981) include items related to parenting, it is not possible to differentiate the stress

The Handbook of Intellectual Disability and Clinical Psychology Practice Alan Carr, Christine Linehan, Gary O'Reilly, Patricia Noonan Walsh, John McEvoy, 2016-04-12

The Handbook of Intellectual Disability and Clinical Psychology Practice will equip clinical psychologists in training with the skills necessary to complete a clinical placement in the field of intellectual disability. Building on the success of the previous edition, this handbook has been extensively revised. Throughout the text, references and website addresses have been updated to reflect important developments since the publication of the first edition. Recent research findings on the epidemiology, aetiology, course, outcome, assessment and treatment of all psychological problems considered in the book have been incorporated into the text. Account has been taken of changes in the diagnosis and classification of intellectual disability and psychological problems reflected in the AAIDD 11 and the DSM 5. New chapters on the assessment of adaptive behaviour and support needs, person-centred active support and the assessment of dementia in people with intellectual disability have been added. The book is divided into eight sections. Section 1 Covers general conceptual frameworks for practice, diagnosis, classification, epidemiology and lifespan development. Section 2 Focuses on assessment of intelligence, adaptive behaviour, support needs, quality of life and the processes of interviewing and report writing. Section 3 Covers intervention frameworks, specifically active support, applied behavioural analysis and cognitive behaviour therapy. Section 4 Deals with supporting families of children with intellectual disability, genetic syndromes and autism spectrum disorders. Section 5 Covers issues associated with intellectual disability first evident or prevalent in middle childhood. Section 6 Deals with adolescent concerns including life skills training, relationships and sexuality. Section 7 Focuses on residential, vocational and family-related challenges of adulthood and aging. Section 8 Deals with professional issues and risk assessment. Chapters cover theoretical and empirical issues on the one hand and practice issues on the other. They close with summaries and suggestions for further reading for practitioners and families containing a member with an intellectual disability. Where appropriate, in many chapters, practice exercises to aid skills development have been included. The second edition of the Handbook of Intellectual Disability and Clinical Psychology Practice is one of a set of three volumes which cover the lion's share of the curriculum for clinical psychologists in training in the UK and Ireland. The other two volumes are the Handbook of Child and Adolescent Clinical Psychology, Third Edition, by Alan Carr and the Handbook of Adult Clinical Psychology Practice, Second Edition, edited by Alan Carr, Muireann McNulty.
