

collapses due to a lack of oxygen. After he recovers, Mr. Spino sends him home, giving him a piece of a dollar bill with the word "student" written on it.

Victor is lectured by Mam about talking to Ana T., whom she despises and does not trust. Victor, who still wants his knife back, approaches Ana T. later that day; however, Ana T. refuses to give it back to him unless he can say the word "knife" without stuttering. Unable to do so, Victor is forced to sever the ties holding the bundles of newspapers together with the edge of a rusty can. That day, Victor runs into a mysterious man named Charles who answers Mrs. Worthington's door. Victor is suspicious of Charles, who claims to be Mrs. Worthington's cousin. Later, Victor overhears Mrs. Worthington crying from within the house.

A week later, Victor runs into Mr. Spino. The two of them talk about the difference between fiction and nonfiction, as well as Victor's stutter and how he might learn to overcome it. When Victor leaves, Mr. Spino hands him another dollar piece, this time with the word "journal" written on it. Victor heads to Mrs. Worthington's house and hears an argument from inside. He knocks on the door, but the door is answered by Mr. Worthington instead of Mrs. Worthington or Charles. Mr. Worthington tells Victor to leave without paying him. Victor overhears the sound of smashing glass as he flees. At home that night, Victor admits to Mam that Ana T. has stolen his knife. To Victor's surprise, Mam doesn't get mad at him but rather tells him not to worry about the knife.

The next week, Victor approaches Mrs. Worthington's house to get the money she owes him, but he tells her to wait until Friday because she seems sad. That night, Victor and his parents go to an Italian restaurant with some family friends. All night, Victor feels excluded because of his stutter. Feeling embarrassed, Victor forces himself to eat and vomits on the table. The family leaves the restaurant, and that night, Victor overhears his mother discussing his stutter, saying that it was a surprise since no one in her family has one. Victor is surprised that his father doesn't say anything about his own family. The next day, Victor goes through his mother's closet and finds his birth certificate, which lists his father as "unknown."

When Victor next sees Mr. Spino, he's invited inside his home, and even though it's against newspaper regulations, he decides to go inside. He finds a home stacked from floor to ceiling with books. After a long discussion about a variety of intellectual topics, Victor admits that he's written a poem before. He types it out for Mr. Spino, and the two of them recite the poem together, which helps Victor with his stutter. Mr. Spino gives him the third dollar piece, which reads "seller."
