Learning Theory in the Practice of Management Development Sara Grant, Aharon Kfir, Stephen A. Stumpf, Mary Anne Watson, 1998-05-21 The workplace is the ideal environment for tying together management theory and practice and yet classes in many regular management development programs are conducted away from the work site and class sizes are so large that individual instruction is difficult to achieve In this book the authors seek effective ways to merge theory with workplace practice and advocate the modular preceptor method whereby participants work together in dyads and triads with a preceptor acting as advisor and instructor Unlike traditional management development programs which do not usually lead to behavior changes the modular preceptor model has behavior change as the basic aim Participants can remain at work while experiencing individualized learning developing problem solving skills and acquiring new knowledge which can be immediately applied to work situations Various ways of learning such as passive lecture case study discussion and experiential role playing games sensitivity training are examined No single mode of learning can be comprehensive and adequate for all situations The authors contend however that experiential learning is most effective for increasing the will and competence to learn and for using what is learned to change manager behavior The purpose of the modular preceptor approach is not to present answers to specific managerial or organizational problems but to help the participant acquire new problem definition and problem solving skills and the confidence to apply them on the job This book also analyzes the contribution of the behavioral sciences to the philosophies and techniques behind management instruction and examines the role of the university in management development and the future direction of MBA programs For anyone concerned with meaningful and effective management development this book is an invaluable resource

The whole landscape of space use is undergoing a radical transformation In the workplace a period of unprecedented change has created a mix of responses with one overriding outcome observable worldwide the rise of distributed space In the learning environment the social political economic and technological changes responsible for this shift have been further compounded by constantly developing theories of learning and teaching and a wide acceptance of the importance of learning as the core of the community resulting in the blending of all aspects of learning into one seamless experience This book attempts to look at all the forces driving the provision and pedagogic performance of the many spaces real and virtual that now accommodate the experience of learning and provide pointers towards the creation and design of learning centred communities Part 1 looks at the entire learning universe as it now stands tracks the way in which its constituent parts came to occupy their role assesses how they have responded to a complex of drivers and gauges their success in dealing with renewed pressures to perform It shows that what is required is innovation within the spaces and integration between them Part 2 finds many examples of innovation in evidence across the world in schools the higher and further education campus and in business and cultural spaces but an almost total absence of integration Part 3 offers a model that redefines the learning landscape in terms of learning outcomes mapping spatial requirements and activities into a detailed mechanism that will achieve the best outcome at the most appropriate scale By encouraging stakeholders to creating an events based rather than space based identity the book hopes to point the way to a fully integrated learning landscape a learning community
