Media, Crime, and Criminal Justice (First Edition) James Buccellato, 2021-01-21 Media Crime and Criminal Justice: A Reader provides readers with a variety of articles that showcase examples of cutting-edge research on crime and media. The text helps students better understand how crime and media are intertwined within culture and how this unique connection influences our behaviors, attitudes, and values. Unit One provides an overview of the major conceptual tools used by media and crime scholars. Dedicated readings explore the concept of globalization to contextualize the study of crime: copycat crime, moral panic, the debate surrounding the influence of violent media content on violent behavior, and more. Unit Two examines common crime narratives in the news, media, and popular culture. Students read about the over-inflation of crime statistics, actors and institutions within the criminal justice system, and television news coverage of corporate crime. Media Coverage of Crime and Criminal Justice Matthew B. Robinson, 2011 Media Coverage of Crime and Criminal Justice critically examines the media to identify how crime and criminal justice are treated in the news and entertainment media The goal is not only to help shed light on important realities of crime and criminal justice in the United States but also to correct major misconceptions created by coverage of crime and criminal justice in the news on television in movies in music and other media forms While there are other texts on the market focused on the impact of mass media on criminal justice this text is the only one that starts with the issue of corporate ownership of the mass media as a potential problem for gaining an accurate understanding of the realities of crime and criminal justice Further this text presents basic information about the media in the introductory chapters and then applies this information to specific issues of crime and criminal justice in the rest of the book thereby focusing on the same issues and themes throughout the book Topics analyzed include how the media are organized how they operate and to what degree citizens are exposed to the media Additionally the book analyzes competing explanations of media coverage of crime and criminal justice using examples from the real world to show why the media cover topics and ignore others the way they do The book deals with media coverage of law making and crime policing courts and corrections There are separate chapters of media coverage of each branch of criminal justice with reviews of the literature focused on the most recent and influential research on these topics The book also examines how the media both help and hinder effective crime control and crime prevention efforts The book concludes with a summary of the book as well as suggestions for media reform based on major findings of the book Author maintained supplemental website at <http://gjs.appstate.edu/research/media> Regularly updated blog by the author at mediacriminaljustice.blogspot.com

Approaches to Criminology series celebrates the removal of traditional barriers between disciplines and specifically reflects criminology's interdisciplinary nature and focus. It brings together some of the leading scholars working at the intersections of criminology and related subjects. Each book in the series helps readers to make intellectual connections between criminology and other discourses and to understand the importance of studying crime and criminal justice within the context of broader debates. The series is intended to have appeal across the entire range of undergraduate and postgraduate studies and beyond comprising books which offer introductions to the fields as well as advancing ideas and knowledge in their subject areas.

Criminal Visions Paul Mason, 2012-12-06 Despite being an increasingly high profile subject few publications address media representations of law and order head on. This book aims to meet this need by bringing together an important range of papers from leading researchers in the field addressing issues of fictional, factual and hybrid representations of crime in the media.

Crime and Media Yvonne Jewkes, 2009

Crime and Media Studies Franklin Wilson, 2015-01-06 Crime and Media Studies concisely and efficiently pulls the curtain back on the reality of crime and punishment and the role media has played in the United States becoming the world's leader in incarceration. By addressing literacy rates that have remained virtually unchanged since 1935, the stark ramifications of the communication disconnect between those who study key issues and the ordinary citizen is explored. Crime and Media Studies calls for the dismantling of ideological divides between qualitative and quantitative researchers in favor of a united multidisciplinary front to create an informed citizenry. Divided into the key parts of the criminal justice system: crime, law, enforcement, courts, corrections, etc., the text explores prominent issues: drugs, domestic violence, race, gender, etc., facing the criminal justice system. Each section contains crime and media research articles that analyze a variety of media: print, news, broadcast, news, movies, court TV, crime dramas, comic books, hip hop, etc., using quantitative, qualitative and mixed methodologies. In the tradition of Gregg Barak's News Making Criminology, each section contains discussion questions designed for traditional and online classrooms, writing assignments, blog posts, press releases, literacy level exercises, brownbag sessions and community engagement projects to help students understand the importance of being able to effectively communicate both with the press and the public. Crime and Media Studies is well suited for undergraduate and graduate courses in the social sciences that seek to address the role of media in policy and legal issues. The text, its test questions, discussion sessions and writing assignments are designed to be used in both traditional and online classrooms. Franklin T. Wilson is an associate professor in the Department of Criminology and Criminal Justice at Indiana State University. He received his Ph.D. from the College of Criminal Justice at Sam Houston State University and has taught crime and media studies courses for over a decade. Dr. Wilson is the founding and current chair of the Annual International Crime Media and Popular Culture Studies Conference and is the editor of the Journal of Criminal Justice and Popular Culture. He is also a member of the Board of Directors for CRIMCAST. His research has been published in such noted journals as The Prison Journal, Journal of Criminal Justice and Popular Culture, Race Justice and

Women Criminal Justice Dr Wilson s research has also been featured in a variety of media outlets including the New York Times Pittsburgh Post Gazette Houston Chronicle and Texas Tribune
