10.1 Behavioural Sciences and Evidence-Based Health care: What Do We Really Need to Measure?

Matteo Motterlini and Carlo Canepa

10.1.1 Measuring Models or Changing Behaviours?

The mantra that inspires healthcare systems is: “If you can’t measure it, you can’t manage it.” The measuring process is closely related to the epistemological ideal of modern science. This has been developed through a world simplification, which is considered useful to disclose principles that work under surrounding reality. The search for natural laws carries a distinctive component: phenomena are not accepted as they are, but they are instead transformed through abstraction and

Myth And Measurement Myth And Measurement:

Myth and Measurement David Card, Alan B. Krueger, 1995 A powerful new challenge to the conventional view that higher minimum wages reduce jobs for low wage workers Using data from recent minimum wage change results economists David Card and Alan Krueger show that increases in the minimum wage lead to increases in pay but no loss in jobs The Myths of Measurement and Meritocracy J. M. Beach, 2021-09-15 This book examines the idea of educational accountability in higher education which has become a new secular gospel But do accountability policies actually make colleges better What if educational accountability tools don't actually measure what they're supposed to What if accountability data isn't valid or worse what if it's meaningless What if administrators don't know how to use accountability tools or correctly analyze the problematic data these tools produce What if we can't measure let alone accurately assess what matters most with teaching or student learning What if students don't learn much in college What if higher education was never designed to produce student learning What if college doesn't help most students either personally or economically What if higher education isn't meritocratic actually exacerbates inequality and makes the lives of disadvantaged students even worse This book will answer these questions with a wide interdisciplinary range of the latest scientific research Contemporary Issues in Teaching and Learning Peter Woods, 2013-11-05 Since the 1988 Education Reform Act our education system has undergone dramatic changes and this in turn has raised a number of controversial issues and questions This reader brings together key articles both recently published and specially commissioned which address these issues and place them in context Issues covered include the curriculum teaching and learning assessment school effectiveness and improvement Various themes run throughout the book include the quest for quality within a social context the application of theory and research to practice and the positive roles played by both teachers and students in adapting to recent change

The Myths of Health Care Paola Adinolfi, Elio Borgonovi, 2017-10-25 This provocative appraisal unpacks commonly held beliefs about healthcare management and replaces them with practical strategies and realistic policy goals Using Henry Mintzberg's Myths of Healthcare as a springboard it reveals management practices that undermine care delivery explores their cultural and corporate origins and details how they may be reversed through changes in management strategy organization scale and style Tackling conventional wisdom about decision making cost effectiveness service quality and equity contributors fine tune concepts of mission and vision by promoting collaboration engagement and common sense The book's multidisciplinary panel of experts analyzes the most popular healthcare management myths among them The healthcare system is failing The healthcare system can be fixed through social engineering Healthcare institutions can be fixed by bringing in the heroic leader The healthcare system can be fixed by treating it more as a business Healthcare is rightly left to the private sector for the sake of efficiency The Myths of Health Care speaks to a large diverse audience scholars of all levels interested in the research in health policy and management graduate and under graduate students attending courses in leadership and management of public sector organization and practitioners in the field of health care
