Insights 1 I have spent half my life on the road I have never tried to write about this way of life not even when I was reporting on people and events along the way It just seemed to have no category I was a journalist following stories then a worker in political campaigns and movements and most consistently an itinerant feminist organizer 2 The first reason I wrote this book was to share the most important longest running yet least visible part of my life traveling 3 Traveling or even living for a few days where you are in an on the road state of mind is important It can begin the moment you leave your door 4 My third hope is to share stories For millennia we have passed down knowledge through story and song The magic of people telling their own stories to groups of strangers is as if attentive people create a magnetic force field for stories they didn't know they had within them
