of Indian literature in theory and the inadequacy of generalizing postcolonial experiences and subjectivities based on literature produced in one language English. It argues that while postcolonial scholarship has successfully challenged Eurocentrism, it is now time to extend the dimensions beyond Anglophone and Francophone literatures to include literatures in other languages such as Hindi, Telugu, Tamil, Tagalog, and Swahili.

Creolizing the Metropole H. Adlai Murdoch, 2012-06-08

A study of how Caribbean immigrants to France and the UK from 1948-1998 and their descendants portray their metropolitan identities in literature and film. Creolizing the Metropole is a comparative study of postwar West Indian migration to the former colonial capitals of Paris and London. It studies the effects of this population shift on national and cultural identity and traces the postcolonial Caribbean experience through analyses of the concepts of identity and diaspora. Through close readings of selected literary works and film, H. Adlai Murdoch explores the ways in which these immigrants and their descendants represented their metropolitan identities. Though British immigrants were colonial subjects and later residents of British Commonwealth nations and the French arrivals from the overseas departments were citizens of France by law, both groups became subject to otherness and exclusion stemming from their ethnicities. Murdoch examines this phenomenon and the questions it raises about borders and boundaries, nationality, and belonging. An outstanding contribution to scholarship, theoretically grounded and meticulously researched, it examines the complexities inherent in constructing new diaspora identities that are at once ethnic, national, and fluid.

Renée Larrier, Rutgers University

In these expansive, fresh, and adroit interpretations of Maryse Condé, Gisèle Pineau, Zadie Smith, White, and Andrea Levy, the author exposes the stark reality that race and the prejudices attached to it is a barrier to unequivocal assimilation. This study affirms that a diasporic duality persists as creolization slowly alters the metropole. Overall, an interesting read. Choice. This book provides an extremely valuable contribution to the fields of postcolonial studies and European literary and film studies in at least three ways: it theoretically refines the concept of creolization; it contributes to much-needed redefinitions of France and the United Kingdom as multicultural; and it foregrounds the aesthetic qualities of the works under study.

Research in African Literatures

Islands and Exiles Chris Bongie, 1998

A comprehensive historical and theoretical study of the creolization process and its relevance to both colonial and postcolonial literatures, this book focuses for the most part on novels from or about the French Caribbean. It examines the ways in which colonial authors such as Bernardin de Saint Pierre and Victor Hugo, as well as such contemporary writers as Édouard Glissant and Daniel Maximin, have represented the process of cultural mixing and confusion to which, under a variety of names (creolization, hybridity, métissage), postcolonial theorists have increasingly turned in order to understand the complexities of cultural identity in today's transnational world. Notwithstanding the obvious differences separating colonial and postcolonial literatures, Islands and Exiles emphasizes their entanglements, mapping out a middle ground in which they are ambivalently linked to one another. An introductory section shows how colonial and postcolonial literatures are joined in a relation of epistemic complicity that the author designates with the word post colonial That relation is exemplified by the intertextual links binding together Daniel Defoe s colonial classic Robinson Crusoe and J M Coetzee s postcolonial rewriting of it Foe Subsequent chapters include an analysis of the central text of Enlightenment exoticism Bernardin s Paul et Virginie overviews of Glissant s novels as well as his theoretical discussions of creolization an examination of fictional representations of the Haitian revolution such as Hugo s Bug Jargal and William Faulkner s Absalom Absalom and an extended consideration of nineteenth century Martiniquan literature and politics The book concludes with a reading of New Zealander Keri Hulmes s the bone people in which the author summarizes his core argument namely that in discussions of cultural identity we need to maintain a fine balance between promoting the hybridizing poetics and politics championed in recent postcolonial theory and re asserting the necessity if not the legitimacy of the insular essentialist claims about identity that the cross cultural dynamics of a globally creolized world have definitively put into question

Transnational Narratives from the Caribbean Elvira Pulitano, 2016-03-10 This book offers a timely intervention in current debates on diaspora and diasporic identity by affirming the importance of narrative as a discursive mode to understand the human face of contemporary migrations and dislocations Focusing on the Caribbean double diaspora Pulitano offers a close reading of a range of popular works by four well known writers currently living in the United States Jamaica Kincaid Michelle Cliff Edwidge Danticat and Caryl Phillips Navigating the map of fictional characters testimonial accounts and autobiographical experiences Pulitano draws attention to the lived experience of contemporary diasporic formations The book offers a provocative re thinking of socio scientific analyses of diaspora by discussing the embodied experience of contemporary diasporic communities drawing on disciplines such as Caribbean Postcolonial Diaspora and Indigenous Studies along with theories on border thinking and coloniality modernity Contesting restrictive national and linguistic boundaries when discussing literature originating from the Caribbean Pulitano situates the transnational location of Caribbean born writers within current debates of Transnational American Studies and investigates the role of immigrant writers in discourses of race ethnicity citizenship and belonging Exploring the multifarious intersections between home exile migration and displacement the book makes a significant contribution to memory and trauma studies human rights debates and international law aiming at a wide range of scholars and specialized agents beyond the strictly literary circle This volume affirms the humanity of personal stories and experiences against the invisibility of immigrant subjects in most theoretical accounts of diaspora and migration

Creole Identity in Postcolonial Indonesia Jacqueline Knörr, 2014-03 Contributing to identity formation in ethnically and religiously diverse postcolonial societies this book examines the role played by creole identity in Indonesia and in particular its capital Jakarta While on the one hand it facilitates transethnic integration and promotes a specifically postcolonial sense of common nationhood due to its heterogeneous origins creole groups of people are often perceived ambivalently in the wake of colonialism and its demise on the other In this book Jacqueline Knörr analyzes the social historical and political contexts of creoleness both at the grassroots and the State level showing how different sections of society engage with creole identity in order to promote collective identification transcending ethnic and religious boundaries as well as for reasons of self interest and ideological projects Creole Identity in the French Caribbean Novel H. Adlai Murdoch, 2009-09-24 Murdoch exploits the postmodern theoretical vocabulary to provide perceptive readings of a selection of French Caribbean novels within the framework of antillanité and créolité E Anthony Hurley State University of New York Stony Brook Adlai Murdoch offers a detailed rereading of five major contemporary French Caribbean writers Glissant Condé Maximin Destrade Pinalie and Chamoiseau Emphasizing the role of narrative in fashioning the cultural and political doubleness of Caribbean Creole identity Murdoch shows how these authors actively rewrite their own colonially driven history Murdoch maintains that the culture of the French Caribbean islands of Guadeloupe and Martinique is less homogeneous and more creatively fragmented than is commonly supposed Promoting a new vision of this multifaceted region he challenges preconceived notions of what it means to be both French and West Indian The author's own West Indian origin provides him with intimate firsthand knowledge of the nuances of day to day Caribbean life While invaluable to students of Caribbean literature this work will also appeal to those interested in the African diaspora French and postcolonial studies and literary theory H Adlai Murdoch associate professor of French and Francophone studies at the University of Illinois at Urbana Champaign is the author of articles in Callaloo Research in African Literatures and Yale French Studies

Postcolonial Identity and Place Anqi Liu, 2018-06-28 Essay from the year 2017 in the subject Sociology Individual Groups Society grade 10 Martin Luther University Deutsche Sprache und Literatur course Introduction to Postcolonial Theory Literature and Film language English abstract Postcolonial studies aim at stripping away conventional thoughts and examine what kind of identity emerges in postcolonial subject The first problem when I set out to work on postcolonial literatures is to confirm its scope This word scope that I put forward here can be explained as follows on the one hand postcolonial literature is apparently vague and general It's such a multinational and multicultural case that it is hard to define which country falls under the rubric Except what we always mentioned as postcolonial countries such as Nigeria India and Pakistan some writers include also countries like Canada Ireland and Australia So when we read the literatures about postcolonial it is apparent for us to discover that they include two parts on the one hand it is based on the dominant or colonizer society on the other hand it talks also about the dominated or colonized society On the other hand there are a large number of relevant themes or aspects around the topic postcolonialism migration race gender resistance slavery and so on Trying to cover all the countries and aspects in one essay seems not so specific In my essay I will focus on the question Who am I This kind of doubt about one's identity is a derivative product of colonialism and a very important topic in postcolonial world When we read literatures we are able to seek out what the indigenous voice wants to express how should the indigenous people see themselves once their place and identity were forced to change Is the dual identity always ambivalent These questions are what I'm going to explain hereinafter Embodying The Postcolonial Life Maurice L. Hall, Jennifer

Keane-Dawes, Amardo Rodriguez, 2004-09 This volume focuses on the experiences of Caribbean academics living and working in the United States Eight essays by Hall communications Villanova U and his two collaborators criticize the dominant theoretical and pedagogical order in academia as too simplistic and closed to different ways of understanding the world In particular they exami

The New Expatriates Anne-Meike Fechter, Katie Walsh, 2017-06-07 While scholarship on migration has been thriving for decades little attention has been paid to professionals from Europe and America who move temporarily to destinations beyond the West Such migrants are marginalised and depoliticised by debates on immigration policy and thus there is an urgent need to develop nuanced understanding of these more privileged movements In many ways these are the modern day equivalents of colonial settlers and expatriates yet the continuities in their migration practices have rarely been considered The New Expatriates advances our understanding of contemporary mobile professionals by engaging with postcolonial theories of race culture and identity The volume brings together authors and research from across a wide range of disciplines seeking to evaluate the significance of the past in shaping contemporary expatriate mobilities and highlighting postcolonial continuities in relation to people practices and imaginations Acknowledging the resonances across a range of geographical sites in Asia Africa and the Middle East the chapters consider the particularity of postcolonial contexts while enabling comparative perspectives A focus on race and culture is often obscured by assumptions about class occupation and skill but this volume explicitly examines the way in which whiteness and imperial relationships continue to shape the migration experiences of Euro American skilled migrants as they seek out new places to live and work This book was originally published as a special issue of the Journal of Ethnic and Migration Studies

Creolization and Pidginization in Contexts of Postcolonial Diversity Jacqueline Knörr, Wilson Trajano Filho, 2018 Creolization and pidginization are conceptualized and investigated as specific social processes in the course of which new common languages socio cultural practices and identifications are developed in contexts of postcolonial diversity shaped by distinct social historical and local conditions
