Immigration and Social Capital in the Age of Social Media Joong-Hwan Oh,2016-02-18 In this new age of social media the role of online ethnic networks is as important as offline ethnic networks families friends etc in helping immigrants adjust to their new country This is something that has received very little attention in the academic field of international immigration which Oh hopes to rectify through this book. He focuses on the five American social institutions: immigration, welfare, education, housing, and finance, to explore this topic through the lens of married Korean American women. In their online MissyUSA community, the largest Korean American women's online community in North America, they share a wide range of information about the rules of each of these social institutions as they work together to navigate American society. Oh explores how the MissyUSA community creates two distinctive forms of social capital: social resources and social support. For some of its members, inquirers or information seekers, the MissyUSA community functions as an important source of their information; social resources about the rules of the American social institutions. Likewise, it also functions as a network of social supporters, respondents, or information providers for those information seekers. Here, what makes this book a significant one is the fact that these social supporters are distinctively identified as instrumental guiders, information describers, expositors, confirmers, and advisors, and emotional supporters, companions, encouragers, and critics. By researching the lives of Korean American women who are members of the MissyUSA community, Oh's book works to understand how a sub set of the Korean American community shares information about American institutions and uses the internet to do so.

The Boy & the Old Man Omar Eby, 2009-02-09 So who is Omar Eby? A retired English professor, tenderhearted and cynical, who looks with affection and severity upon the young man he once was in Somalia. Eby's first chapter, "Learning My Name," quickly and playfully sets the tone for this fascinating memoir. The Boy and the Old Man. Identifying with one Omar after another, Eby skips from a Taliban terrorist and a four star general to a translator of Somali tales and an Old Testament duke, then recalls an English student in Mogadiscio and an Epicurean Persian poet, meets a Chilean Anabaptist, and finally names the close friend of Prophet Muhammad, Omar ibn al Khattab. You think this an exercise in narcissism? Of course not! The author finds too many ties linking a naive Mennonite missionary boy to Muslim society and the incredible beauty of the natural world. Shows too well the tensions between documented facts and dramatic memory. On the horn of Africa, Somali pirates seize tankers. On the mainland, clans fire rockets into each other's quarters of Mogadishu, once the capital of the Somali Republic. But Omar Eby remembers another Somalia, when he taught there 50 years ago. Through the grid of accumulated years, Eby studies that missionary boy. The reader hears two voices: the 23 year old boy and the 73 year old man. Often the old man loves the boy, often the boy embarrasses him. The Somalis Eby remembers as beautiful and exasperating, then in 1959, as now in 2009. The chapters are like a series of transparencies laid down one on top of the other. The boy's views overlaid by the man's two visits to Somalia in his thirties, and then memory laid over everything. With more details, everything should be clearer. Yet Eby writes in the Introduction, we are pleasantly surprised to find that the historically reconstructed self is still blurred as muddy as the Shebelle River which flows through Somalia from the Ethiopian highlands.
