

What Is Metalepsis?

EnglishLeaflet.com

Metalepsis refers to a narrative in which one level of a narrative invades or merges with another. It is normally the blend of different narrative levels, which is the world of the author and the world described in the plot with the characters.

Example "Don Quixote" by Miguel de Cervantes

"Idle reader: you may believe me when I say that I should have liked this book, as the child of my understanding, to be the most beautiful, the most gallant, and the most intelligent that could be imagined. But I could not contravene the order of nature, by which like begets like... What you are about to read, is a narrative composed by an ingenious gentleman who wrote the first part of the adventures of Don Quixote de la Mancha, and who has now continued the history."
