Mothers, Babies, and Cocaine Michael Lewis, Margaret Bendersky, 1995 A fetus cannot just say no to drugs Use of substances of abuse during pregnancy has skyrocketed in recent years due in part to the ready availability of crack cocaine The media have decried the burdens on our health care and educational systems imposed by the adverse consequences of prenatal exposure to cocaine But how much do we really know about the effects of this insult Is prenatal cocaine exposure a convenient excuse for the adverse outcomes associated with a myriad of physical and social ills afflicting the drug using population This volume presents the most recent scientifically based knowledge about prenatal exposure to substances of abuse Written by prominent researchers in the field it describes what we do and do not know about the mechanisms of the action of cocaine on the developing brain strategies for studying this complex issue the implications of drug exposure and a drug using environment for long term functioning in the cognitive social and emotional domains and possible intervention strategies to prevent developmental problems in children at high risk This volume will be a valuable addition to the libraries of researchers policymakers and practitioners concerned about cocaine exposed infants Neurodevelopmental Mechanisms in Psychopathology Dante Cicchetti, Elaine F. Walker, 2003-08-18 This volume represents a burgeoning perspective on the origins of psychopathology one that focuses on the development of the human central nervous system The contemporary neurodevelopmental perspective assumes that mental disorders result from etiologic factors that alter the normal course of brain development Defined here in its broadest sense neurodevelopment is a process that begins at conception and extends throughout the life span We now know that it is a complex process and that its course can be altered by a host of factors ranging from inherited genetic liabilities to psychosocial stressors This book features the very best thinking in the converging fields of developmental neuroscience and developmental psychopathology The developmental window represented is broad extending from the prenatal period through adulthood and the authors cover a broad range of etiologic factors and a spectrum of clinical disorders Moreover the contributors did not hesitate to use the opportunity to hypothesize about underlying mechanisms and to speculate on research directions Human Developmental

Emotional Development in Atypical Children

Michael Lewis, Margaret Wolan Sullivan, 2014-03-05 Early emotional development emotional regulation and the links between emotion and social or cognitive functioning in atypically developing children have not received much attention This lack is due in part to the priorities given to the educational and therapeutic needs of these children Yet an understanding of the basic emotional processes in children with atypical development can only serve to promote more effective strategies for teaching and intervening in the lives of these children and their families and may contribute to our understanding of basic emotional processes as well When referring to emotions the editors mean some complex set of processes or abilities whether or not the topic is normal or atypical development Specifically they use the term emotion to refer to at least three things emotional expressions emotional states and emotional experiences The focus of this volume these three aspects of emotional life are affected by socialization practices maturational change and individual biological differences including in this case differences in children as a function of disability Contributors examine the development of emotions in children with organic or psychological disorders as well as those in compromised social contexts making this volume of prime importance to developmental clinical and social psychologists educators and child mental health experts Environmental Effects on Cognitive Abilities Robert J. Sternberg, Elena L. Kato, Traci Mann, 2007-07-27 The field of health psychology has grown dramatically in the last decade with exciting new developments in the study of how psychological and psychosocial processes contribute to risk for and disease sequelae for a variety of medical problems In addition the quality and effectiveness of many of our treatments and health promotion and disease prevention efforts have been significantly enhanced by the contributions of health psychologists Taylor 1995 Unfortunately however much of the theorizing in health psychology and the empirical research that derives from it continue to reflect the mainstream bias of psychology and medicine both of which have a primary focus on white heterosexual middle class American men This bias pervades our thinking despite the demographic heterogeneity of American society U S Bureau of the Census 1992 and the substantial body of epidemiologic evidence that indicates significant group differences in health status burden of morbidity and mortality life expectancy quality of life and the risk and protective factors that contribute to these differences in health outcomes National Center for Health Statistics 1994 Myers Kagawa Singer Kumanyika Lex Castro Coe Gutierrez Chesney Nealey this volume Developmental Psychopathology Suniya S. Dobbing, 1997-08-13 Certain long chain polyunsaturated fatty acids LCPUFAs are thought to be essential components of the nutrition of infants including those prematurely born in the sense that they cannot be synthesised by the immature organism and must therefore be supplied in the diet Breast milk contains these substances but many manufactured infant formulae do not An absence of dietary LCPUFAs has been thought to affect the development of the brain and retina possibly leading to abnormalities in cognitive and visual function Considerable multidisciplinary research has been carried out to investigate this proposition Diets free from LCPUFAs have been compared with supplemented formulae or with breast milk The conclusions from this research were critically examined by a group of leading paediatricians nutritionists experts in visual science and developmental behavioural scientists at a Dobbing Workshop held in the United States in late February 1997 Each of the Chapters was precirculated to the whole group commented on before the Workshop and then exhaustively discussed The Chapters and Commentaries which are published here have therefore undergone a more extensive peer review process than is usually the case Developmental Psychopathology, Maladaptation and Psychopathology Dante

Visual Information Processing Kimiyo Murata-Soraci,2003-03-30 Visual information processing in humans with intellectual disabilities and in animals is presented for conceptual and methodological reasons Much of the evolutionary path of higher primate species has involved the development of sophisticated visual systems that interact with complex higher order cognitive processes Key questions in cognitive science address the manner in which the environment is represented by the organism and thus relate to how knowledge about the world is gleaned with implications for theories of action and decision making Finally it has become apparent that the distinction between perceptual and cognitive processes is not always a clear one and that these processes interact in critical ways in underlying complex behavioral repertoires Consistent with the emphasis in this series on individual differences both typical and atypical development are explored here Philosophical approaches to visualism are also presented Chapters have import both for basic science and for the development of applications

Parenting and Substance Abuse Nancy E. Suchman,Marjukka Pajulo,Linda C. Mayes,2013-02-15 Historically there has been little integration of theoretical or applied research on addiction treatment and parenting intervention development Rather the fields of addiction and developmental research have progressed on largely separate trajectories even though their focus powerfully and often tragically intersects each time a parent is diagnosed with a substance use disorder Parenting and Substance Abuse is the first book to report on pioneering efforts to move the treatment of substance abusing parents forward by embracing their roles and experiences as mothers and fathers directly and continually across the course of treatment The chapters in this volume represent important new strides among researchers and clinicians to address and close the increasingly recognizable gap between addiction and developmental science Chapters focus on current state of the art treatment models for parents primarily pregnant and parenting women including descriptions of innovative treatments currently being developed and evaluated that focus on parental addiction and the parent child relationship within a developmental framework Part I covers the theoretical understandings of how addiction impacts the developmental processes of parenting Part II discusses risk assessment evaluation and a variety of interventions and therapies This unique volume will be of importance to clinicians researchers students and trainees in the health professions who develop implement and evaluate interventions for parental addiction including in well baby clinics primary care settings pediatric clinics and residential and outpatient drug treatment programs
