Student Affairs Assessment, Evaluation, and Research Vicki L. Wise, Zebulun R. Davenport, 2019-02-11 This unique book

is a valuable tool for all student affairs educators. The text opens with an exploration of the history of assessment in higher education in general and then student affairs more specifically. Having established a historical perspective, the reader then delves into chapters that align with the Assessment Evaluation and Research (AER) competency and accompanying rubric. It provides the reader with a unique approach to learning and understanding AER. It is designed in a format that describes, defines, and assesses this competency at the foundational, intermediate, and advanced outcome levels, suggests ways to apply this competency in practice through case studies from student affairs, and provides tools for the assessment of competency understanding. All chapters include relevant terminology necessary for understanding the competency applied to a case study and an opportunity for self-assessment. While the book is designed for those who are preparing to become student affairs educators and for those who are new to this discipline, it is certainly filled with information and resources for entry-level, mid-level, and senior-level professionals. The text is not only a blueprint but also a global positioning system on assessment, evaluation, and research in student affairs to guide the reader in the process of helping and educating students. The book bridges the gap between who one is today and who one wants to become as a future student affairs educator. As a guidebook, it is a unique and valuable source to aid the student in developing real professional competency.

New Realities in the Management of Student Affairs Ashley Tull, Linda Kuk, 2023-07-03. Student affairs organizations are at a crossroads. They face expanding enrollments, a concomitant increase in need for often more complex services, changing demographics, a growing cohort of non-traditional and first-generation students, shifting and more demanding responsibilities, and increased expectations from the greater campus community, parents, and external constituents. These challenges are intensified by the accelerating speed of advancements in technology, globalization, innovation, and student consumerism, and by the long-term reality of shrinking resources and limitations on the ability to increase tuition and fees. This book shares alternative ideas about organizational design and about ways to restructure roles and responsibilities to enable student affairs organizations to respond to these challenges and demands more effectively at a time of reduced resources. It also addresses the many emerging roles that student affairs organizations are increasingly being expected to address, such as IT, fund raising, and development, external communications, human resources management, and professional development, as well as research and assessment, and describes approaches developed by a variety of institutions. The contributors also pay attention to the solutions appropriate for smaller institutions and for community colleges. They explore the various dimensions of change and offer frameworks to help student affairs leaders and practitioners to more effectively understand and manage the changes they are confronting and describe ideas and solutions adopted by others within the profession.
