Inclusive Aims Heather Brook Adams, Nancy Myers, 2024-03-02 Inclusive Aims Rhetoric s Role in Reproductive Justice engages with fraught reproductive realities past present and future and offers analysis and advice for coalitional alliance and strategy building For those who legitimately value the needs desires and safety of reproducing people recent years have demonstrated that in the United States especially reproductive matters represent not only contestation but extreme precarity. Considering such pressing exigencies, those pursuing just reproductive politics can benefit from thinking about such events and actions rhetorically and not in isolation but as interconnected and connected to larger webs of action. The collection features a range of activist scholars and scholar activists, each of whom shares and/or interrogates stories of reproductive justice. Its topics range from discourse practices related to telehealth, birthing, doula care, and negligence due to systemic racism and transphobia to representations of vasectomy, strategies for political solidarity, and considerations for navigating the challenges of activist interventions. The project mindfully infuses insights from thought traditions of reproductive justice activists and scholars outside of rhetoric. Through its varied chapters, the collection demonstrates how rhetorics of reproductive politics function as a means by which various injustices are illuminated and addressed. Contributors include Zachary Beare, Fabiola Carriñ, Hannah Dudley Shotwell, Natalie Fixmer, Oraiz Meta, Henty Adele N. Nichols, Sheri Rysdam, Shuiyin Sharon Yam, Michelle C. Smith, Melissa Stone, Jill Swiencicki, Jenna Vinson, and James D. Warwood.

Mothering Rhetorics Lynn O'Brien Hallstein, 2020-03-03. Once only a topic among women in the private sphere, motherhood and mothering have become important intellectual topics across academic disciplines. Even so, no book has yet devoted a sustained look at how exploring mothering rhetorics, the rhetorics of reproduction, rhetorics about the reproductive function of women, mothers, and reproducing rhetorics, the rhetorical reproduction of ideological systems and logics of contemporary culture, expand our understanding of mothering, motherhood, communication, and gender. Mothering Rhetorics begins to fill this gap for scholars and teachers interested in the study of mothering rhetorics in their historical and contemporary permutations. The contributions explore the racialized rhetorical contexts of maternity, how fixing food is thought to fix families while also regulating maternal activities and identity, how Black female breastfeeding activists resisted the exploitation of African American mothers in Detroit, how women in pink collar occupations both adhere to and challenge maternity leave discourses by rhetorically positioning their leaves as time off and disability, identifying verbal and nonverbal shaming practices related to unwed motherhood during the mid-twentieth century, and redefining alternative postpartum/placenta practices. This book was originally published as a special issue of Women's Studies in Communication.

Parenting/Internet/Kids: Domesticating Technologies Fiona Joy Green, Jaqueline McLeod Rogers, 2022-07-07. Parenting Internet Kids, with three key terms slashed together, conveys the idea that the practice of parenting may extend both to the Internet and to our children to the extent that both require attention, care, and forms of regulation and in turn provide support and enjoyment. While the triadic title is somewhat playful, it also strikes a serious note and introduces layered possibilities: we are not simply raising children who have grown up in the internet age but also Domesticating Technologies by managing the computer, relatively young in age, too, having established itself in homes in the 1980s. Including perspectives from scholars and parents living in Australia, Canada, India, Japan, the UK, and the USA, the collection examines how the intimate presence of computer technology in our homes and on our bodies affects not only mothers and parenting but family life more broadly You're Doing it Wrong! Bethany L. Johnson, Margaret M. Quinlan, 2019-04-19 New mothers face a barrage of confounding decisions during the life cycle of early motherhood which includes Should they change their diet or mindset to conceive Exercise while pregnant Should they opt for a home birth or head for a hospital Whatever they choose they will be sure to find plenty of medical expertise from health practitioners to social media influencers telling them that they re making a series of mistakes As intersectional feminists with two small children each Bethany L Johnson and Margaret M Quinlan draw from their own experiences as well as stories from a range of caretakers throughout You re Doing it Wrong investigates the storied history of mothering advice in the media from the newspapers magazines doctors records and personal papers of the nineteenth century to today s websites Facebook groups and Instagram feeds Johnson and Quinlan find surprising parallels between today s mothering experts and their Victorian counterparts but they also explore how social media has placed unprecedented pressures on new mothers even while it may function as social support for some They further examine the contentious construction of prenatal and baby care expertise itself as individuals such as everyone from medical professionals to experienced moms have competed to have their expertise acknowledged in the public sphere Exploring potential health crises from infertility treatments to better babies milestones You re Doing it Wrong provides a provocative look at historical and contemporary medical expertise during conception pregnancy childbirth postpartum and infant care stages

Enduring Shame Heather Brook Adams, 2022-05-17 A study of the rhetorical power of shame and its effect on reproductive politics Not long ago unmarried pregnant women in the United States hid in maternity homes and relinquished their illegitimate children to more deserving two parent families all to conceal shameful pregnancies Although times have changed reproductive politics remain fraught In Enduring Shame Heather Brook Adams recasts the 1960s and 70s an era of presumed progress as a time when expanding reproductive rights were paralleled by communicative practices of shame that cultivated increasingly public interventions into unwed and teen pregnancy and new forms of injustice Drawing from personal interviews archival documents legal decisions public policy journalism memoirs and advocacy writing Adams articulates how the rhetorical power of shame persuaded the American public to think about reproduction sexual righteousness and unwed pregnancy Despite the aspirational goals of reproductive liberation public sentiment frequently reflected supremacist beliefs regarding racial economic and moral fitness notions that informed new public policy Enduring Shame maps a range of experiences across these decades from women's experiences in homes for unwed mothers to policy and legal changes that are typically understood as proof of shame's dissipation including Title IX legislation and Roe v Wade Rhetorical historiography and questions of reproductive justice guide the analysis and women's testimonies provide essential perspectives and context Through these histories Adams articulates a network of language affect and embodiment through which shame moves expands rhetorical understandings of the discursive power of the identities of woman and mother and considers how the gendered raced and classed aspects of shame can help us understand and support reproductive dignity Enduring Shame recovers a misunderstood part of women's recent history by considering why reproductive politics continue to be so volatile despite previous gains and why shame still figures centrally in discourse about women's reproductive and sexual freedoms

Reproductive Justice and Human Rights are the main audience of the volume Birth controlled Amrita Pande, 2022-06-14

Birth controlled analyses the world of selective reproduction the politics of who gets to legitimately reproduce the future through a cross cultural analysis of three modes of controlling birth contraception reproductive violence and repro genetic technologies It argues that as fertility rates decline worldwide the fervour to control fertility and fertile bodies does not dissipate what evolves is the preferred mode of control Although new technologies like those that assist conception or allow genetic selection may appear to be an antithesis of other violent versions of population control this book demonstrates that both are part of the same continuum All population control policies target and vilify women Black women in particular and coerce them into subjecting their bodies to state and medical surveillance Birth controlled argues that assisted reproductive technologies and repro genetic technologies employ a similar and stratified burden of blame and responsibility based on gender race class and caste To empirically and historically ground the analysis the book includes contributions from two postcolonial nations South Africa and India examining interactions between the history of colonialism and the economics of neoliberal markets and their influence on the technologies and politics of selective reproduction The book provides a critical interdisciplinary and cutting edge dialogue around the interconnected issues that shape reproductive politics in an ostensibly post population control era The contributions draw on a breadth of disciplines ranging from gender studies sociology medical anthropology politics and science and technology studies to theology public health and epidemiology facilitating an interdisciplinary dialogue around the interconnected modes of controlling birth and practices of neo eugenics

School Choice and the Betrayal of Democracy Robert Asen, 2021-10-05 Evidence shows that the increasing privatization of K 12 education siphons resources away from public schools resulting in poorer learning conditions underpaid teachers and greater inequality But as Robert Asen reveals here the damage that market based education reform inflicts on society runs much deeper At their core these efforts are antidemocratic Arguing that democratic communities and public education need one another Asen examines the theory driving privatization popularized in the neoliberalism of Milton and Rose Friedman as well as the case for school choice promoted by former secretary of education Betsy DeVos and the controversial voucher program of former Wisconsin governor Scott Walker What Asen finds is that a market based approach holds not just a different view of distributing education but a different vision of society When the values of the market choice competition and self interest shape national education that policy produces individuals Asen contends with no connections to community and no obligations to one another The result is a society at odds with democracy Probing and thought provoking School Choice and the Betrayal of Democracy features interviews with local on the ground advocates for public education and offers a countering vision of democratic education one oriented toward civic relationships community and equality This book is essential reading for policymakers advocates of public education citizens and researchers
