

Juan Gris
I was in Barcelona and there

Juan Gris Houses in Paris, 1911

"I think it is one of the greatest of urban visions. In Gris's painting the city can be found both as picture and as model for a composition of space" notes Peter Viles on the new site of the exhibition "Grisman: The Invention of Cubism by Juan Gris 1887-1927" at Tate. In artistic language in Europe (1911-1927) Unlike the Impressionists and the Fauvists, who chose urban life as subject for the most "real" art, as a reference, for this a real life experiment, a challenge to what is real. The city is a subject that the artist can no longer be perceived reality of form and volume as well as their representational and perceptive positions.

Juan Gris painted the picture Houses in Paris (Maisons à Paris) at a time in which, despite the physical proximity to Paris, he was still preoccupied with the work of Paul Cézanne. Gris, who also migrated from Spain (initially from Valencian Girona), came to Paris in the year after studying painting and graphics in Madrid. He was to come still closer to his artistic affiliation with Pablo Picasso, whose studio neighbor he became by 1912, for he was already among the artists represented by Daniel-Henry Kahnweiler.

Kahnweiler soon gave several times during visits to Gris's studio. The theme was once he repeatedly was made by Gris, who at that point in time could not yet be named among the Cubists (and appeared in the "Salon des Indépendants" in the year was completely convinced Kahnweiler had no choice of the same year Kahnweiler offered him an exclusive contract which was accepted in writing in February 1912. Kahnweiler later recalled: "From I was convinced I had discovered an important painter in this artist whose development I had already long since followed. I came to an agreement with him in the winter of the same year to buy his entire future production, plus all of the works that were in his studio."

In each visit Gris concentrated on constructing a new fully grounded urban vision. His work Houses in Paris can be read as an example how Gris did not proceed randomly, but instead working logically to his art. Even in his early production around 1911, Gris anticipated urban inversions of form. In his painting Houses in Paris is his comprehensive monograph about Gris.

In 1922 the Frenchman Gris published the following statement in his essay "What is cubism?" (in French with the title for the "Bulletin de la Société des Artistes Cubistes": "Grisman" from 1911 and 1922) in a magazine was after world reconstruction, but rather worked in a certain spirit that identified us as being aligned with it. There are thought about its essence and its character as someone would who had observed it from the end process and himself with it before adopting it. Today it is clear to me that Cubism, with beginning, was nothing more than a new way of looking at the world... I mean that in the beginning I chose an art medium that had no more to do with painting than the description of physical phenomena has to do with physics. But now, because the technique of painting was a method for all elements of the so-called Cubist artists, and because through the conditions of the relationships between objects, the analysis of space has had these need to problems are not no longer under this conviction. If the whole was called Cubism was only a certain aspect, then Cubism has disappeared. It is an artists, then it has merged with painting."
