Neurobiology of Grooming Behavior Allan V. Kalueff, Justin L. La Porte, Carisa L. Bergner, 2010-05-20 Grooming is among the most evolutionary ancient and highly represented behaviours in many animal species It represents a significant proportion of an animal s total activity and between 30 50% of their waking hours Recent research has demonstrated that grooming is regulated by specific brain circuits and is sensitive to stress as well as to pharmacologic compounds and genetic manipulation making it ideal for modelling affective disorders that arise as a function of stressful environments such as stress and post traumatic stress disorder Over a series of 12 chapters that introduce and explicate the field of grooming research and its significance for the human and animal brain this book covers the breadth of grooming animal models while simultaneously providing sufficient depth in introducing the concepts and translational approaches to grooming research Written primarily for graduates and researchers within the neuroscientific community Neural Mechanisms and Biological Significance of Grooming Behavior Deborah L. Colbern, Willem Hendrik Gispen, 1988-01-01
