Topic: Law | Words: 645 | Pages: 2

The Main Components of the Criminal Justice System

Criminal actions may have a considerable destructive impact on various aspects of society. Therefore, the criminal justice system is designed in order to control crime by a number of techniques. There are three primary components of the criminal justice system, including law enforcement, the courts, and corrections (Burke et al., 2019). Each component has several functions, which are related to crime regulation. Law enforcement may be the basis of the criminal justice system as it provides preliminary counteraction to law violations (Naughton, 2018). It may be maintained by police officers, government agents, sheriffs, and detectives. The second stage of the criminal justice system is represented by the court system. State and federal courts maintain fair trials and prevent violations of rights. The system might be represented by judges, prosecutors, and lawyers (Neubauer & Fradella, 2019). The last component of the criminal justice system is the correction system, which is designed to separate deviant individuals from society and provide correction opportunities. The correction component involves such facilities as jails and prisons, and in some cases, its functions may be delegated to community correction.

Component Interrelations

As the above-mentioned components are part of a systemic whole, they interrelate significantly on various levels. The majority of interactions are related to the transition of individuals from one component to another. For example, the law enforcement system may ensure the delivery of a
