Reading for Our Lives Maya Payne Smart, 2022-08-02 An award winning journalist and literacy advocate provides a clear step by step guide to helping your child thrive as a reader and a learner When her child went off to school Maya Smart was shocked to discover that a good education in America is a long shot in ways that few parents fully appreciate Our current approach to literacy offers too little too late and attempting to play catch up when our kids get to kindergarten can no longer be our default strategy We have to start at the top The brain architecture for reading develops rapidly during infancy and early language experiences are critical to building it That means parents work as children's first teachers begins from day one too and we need deeper knowledge to play our positions Reading for Our Lives challenges the bath book bed mantra and the idea that reading aloud to our kids is enough to ensure school readiness. Instead it gives parents easy immediate and accessible ways to nurture language and literacy development from the start. Through personal stories, historical accounts, scholarly research and practical tips, this book presents the life and death urgency of literacy, investigates inequity in reading achievement and illuminates a path to a true transformative education for all.

Hyper Education Pawan Dhingra, 2021-09-07. An up close look at the education arms race of after school learning, academic competitions and the perceived failure of even our best schools to educate children. Beyond soccer leagues, music camps and drama lessons, today's youth are in an education arms race that begins in elementary school. In Hyper Education, Pawan Dhingra uncovers the growing world of high achievement education and the after school learning centers, spelling bees and math competitions that it has spawned. It is a world where immigrant families vie with other Americans to be at the head of the class, putting in hours of studying and testing in order to gain a foothold in the supposed meritocracy of American public education. A world where enrichment centers like Kumon have seen 194 percent growth since 2002 and target children as young as three. Even families and teachers who avoid after school academics are getting swept up. Drawing on over 100 in depth interviews with teachers, tutors, principals, children and parents, Dhingra delves into the why people participate in this phenomenon and examines how schools, families and communities play their part. Moving past Tiger Mom stereotypes, he addresses why Asian American and white families practice what he calls hyper education and whether or not it makes sense. By taking a behind the scenes look at the Scripps National Spelling Bee, other national competitions and learning centers, Dhingra shows why good schools, good grades and good behavior are seen as not enough for high achieving students and their parents and why the education arms race is likely to continue to expand.

strategy to do so. Though we should not fool ourselves into thinking that it will be easy to eliminate identity politics, we should not overthink it either. Identity politics relies on the creation of groups and then on giving people incentives to adhere to them. If we eliminate group making and the enticements, we can get rid of identity politics. The first myth that this book exposes is that identity politics is a grassroots movement when from the beginning it has been and continues to be an elite project. For too long we have lived with the fairy tale that America has organically grown into a nation gripped by victimhood and identitarian division that it is all the result of legitimate demands by minorities for recognition or restitutions for past wrongs. The second myth is that identity politics is a response to the demographic change this country has undergone since immigration laws were radically changed in 1965. Another myth we are told is that to fight these changes is as depraved as it is futile since by 2040 America will be a minority majority country anyway. This book helps to explain that none of these things are necessarily true.
