Entrepreneurship in a Time of Social Justice Advocacy James O. Fiet, 2023-07-08 This book offers a critique of social justice theory and its impact on entrepreneurship scholarship It traces its deep roots in postmodernism by positioning entrepreneurship within these new intellectual social and economic environments It highlights current philosophical assumptions with implications for boundary conditions that we apply as scientists Science depends on theoretical assumptions and boundary conditions Unfortunately a glaring weakness in entrepreneurship research has been its general failure to identify these premises No theory is universally applicable so its assumptions and boundary conditions are what give it analytical power Where do they come from Simply stated they come from a theory s philosophy of science However even more rare than stating assumptions and boundary conditions is to discuss a study s governing philosophy In fact no known research published in entrepreneurship has discussed a study s philosophical orientation This provocative work details postmodern concerns related to critical theory their origins their status and specifically how they impact entrepreneurship and those who are not designated as either the victimized or part of the white patriarchy It will challenge the current direction of entrepreneurship research and confront the general acceptance of the tenets of postmodernism among management scholars
