of bhikkhus monks and bhikkhunis nuns the Sangha which continues to this day to pass his teachings on to subsequent generations of laypeople and monastics alike Because of our ignorance avijja of these Noble Truths because of our inexperience in framing the world in their terms we remain bound to samsara the wearisome cycle of birth aging illness death and rebirth Craving propels this process onward from one moment to the next and over the course of countless lifetimes in accordance with kamma Skt karma the universal law of cause and effect According to this immutable law every action that one performs in the present moment whether by body speech or mind itself eventually bears fruit according to its skillfulness act in unskillful and harmful ways and unhappiness is bound to follow act skillfully and happiness will ultimately ensue 13 As long as one remains ignorant of this principle one is doomed to an aimless existence happy one moment in despair the next enjoying one lifetime in heaven the next in hell Because the roots of ignorance are so intimately entwined with the fabric of the psyche the unawakened mind is capable of deceiving itself with breathtaking ingenuity The solution therefore requires more than simply being kind loving and mindful in the present moment The practitioner must equip him or herself with the expertise to use a range of tools to outwit outlast and eventually uproot the mind's unskillful tendencies For example the practice of generosity dana erodes the heart's habitual tendencies towards craving and teaches valuable lessons about the motivations behind and the results of skillful action The practice of virtue sila guards one against straying wildly off course and into harm's way The cultivation of goodwill metta helps to undermine anger's seductive grasp The ten recollections offer ways to alleviate doubt bear physical pain with composure maintain a healthy sense of self respect overcome laziness and complacency and restrain oneself from unbridled lust And there are many more skills to learn This first enlightenment experience known as stream entry sotapatti is the first of four progressive stages of Awakening each of which entails the irreversible shedding or weakening of several fetters samyojana the manifestations of ignorance that bind a person to the cycle of birth and death Stream entry marks an unprecedented and radical turning point both in the practitioner's current life and in the entirety of his or her long journey in samsara For it is at this point that any lingering doubts about the truth of the Buddha's teachings disappear it is at this point that any belief in the purifying efficacy of rites and rituals evaporates and it is at this point that the long cherished notion of an abiding personal self falls away The stream enterer is said to be assured of no more than seven future rebirths all of them favorable before eventually attaining full Awakening *Хабудда.
