These authors also discuss the importance of the role of the family in the development of the child. They argue that the family is the primary socialization agent for the child, and that the quality of the family environment is crucial for the child's development. They also discuss the importance of the role of the teacher in the classroom, and how the teacher can create a supportive and stimulating environment for the child. They argue that the teacher should be a facilitator of learning, and that the classroom should be a place where the child can learn at their own pace and in their own way. They also discuss the importance of the role of the community in the development of the child, and how the community can provide a supportive and stimulating environment for the child. They argue that the community should be a place where the child can learn about the world and about themselves, and that the community should be a place where the child can feel a sense of belonging and of purpose.
