Student Exploration: Seasons: Earth, Moon, and Sun

Background Seasons are caused by Earth's rotation around the Sun, revolution around Earth, and axial tilt.

Prior Knowledge Questions (Do these BEFORE using the Gizmo.)

1. Suppose you were stranded in the Southern United States and you had no knowledge of time. How would you know which day is winter or a particular season? I don't know. I would just wait.
2. How would you determine if you were in the Northern Hemisphere? I would look at the stars.

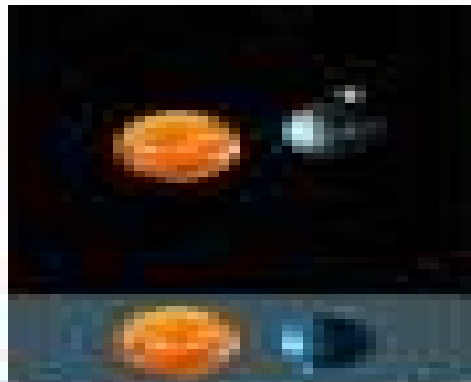

Warm-Up

Thousands of years ago, people had already begun writing down the history of the world, and the discovery of the calendar was one of the earliest milestones in human progress. How does it work? Find out by using the Gizmo.

In the Gizmo, Earth spins around the Sun, and the Moon spins around Earth. You can watch the passage of time by clicking on the play button.

Click the Simulation speed slider at the top right of the Gizmo, and observe the following three parts.

- A. What happens? The Earth is rotating.
- B. How does the Moon spin around Earth? The Sun spins on Earth, slow, but in a spin.
- C. How does Earth rotate on its axis? The Earth is rotating.
- D. How does Earth's rotation affect the day and night? It makes a circular path.
