The rise of economic liberalism in the latter stages of the 20th century coincided with a fundamental transformation of international economic governance especially through the law of the World Trade Organization In this book Andrew Lang provides a new account of this transformation and considers its enduring implications for international law Against the commonly held idea that neoliberal policy prescriptions were encoded into WTO law Lang argues that the last decades of the 20th century saw a reinvention of the international trade regime and a reconstitution of its internal structures of knowledge In addition the book explores the way that resistance to economic liberalism was expressed and articulated over the same period in other areas of international law most prominently international human rights law It considers the promise and limitations of this form of inter regime contestation arguing that measures to ensure greater collaboration and cooperation between regimes may fail in their objectives if they are not accompanied by a simultaneous destabilization of each regime s structures of knowledge and characteristic features With that in mind the book contributes to a full and productive contestation of the nature and purpose of global economic governance Working Mother ,2003-10 The magazine that

Pricing Heart Attack Treatments David M. Cutler,1999 In this paper we estimate price indices for heart attack treatments demonstrating the techniques that are currently used in official price indices and presenting some alternatives We consider two types of price indices a Service Price Index which prices specific treatments provided and a Cost of Living Index which prices the health outcomes of patients Both indices are complicated by price measurement issues list prices and transactions prices are fundamentally different in the medical care field The development of new or modified medical treatments further complicates the comparison of like goods over time And the Cost of Living Index is hampered by the need to determine how much of health improvement results from medical treatments in comparison to other factors We describe methods to address each of these obstacles We conclude that whereas traditional price indices when applied to heart attack treatments are rising at roughly 3 percent per year above general inflation a corrected service price index is rising at perhaps 1 to 2 percent per year above general inflation and the cost of living index is falling by 1 to 2 percent per year relative to general inflation We discuss the implications of these results for official price index calculations Working Paper Series ,1999 Latin America and East Asia in the Context of an Insurance Model of Currency Crises Menzie David Chinn,Michael P. Dooley,Sona Shrestha,1999 This paper focuses on the 1995 Latin American and 1997 East Asian crises using an insurance based model of financial crises First the model of Dooley forthcoming is described Second some empirical evidence for an insurance model is presented The key variables in this approach include the ratio of foreign exchange reserves to bank loans domestic credit extended to the private sector the ability of the private sector to appropriate government assets and appropriation as measured by capital flight We argue that the insurance model is consistent with the observed evolution of these variables in the recent crises in Latin America and Asia Finally we examine the statistical evidence in favor of the model using panel regressions We find that the econometric results are consistent with the insurance model and tend to support this approach over some competing explanations
