The One vs. the Many Alex Woloch, 2009-02-09 Does a novel focus on one life or many Alex Woloch uses this simple question to develop a powerful new theory of the realist novel based on how narratives distribute limited attention among a crowded field of characters His argument has important implications for both literary studies and narrative theory Characterization has long been a troubled and neglected problem within literary theory Through close readings of such novels as Pride and Prejudice Great Expectations and Le Père Goriot Woloch demonstrates that the representation of any character takes place within a shifting field of narrative attention and obscurity Each individual whether the central figure or a radically subordinated one emerges as a character only through his or her distinct and contingent space within the narrative as a whole The character space as Woloch defines it marks the dramatic interaction between an implied person and his or her delimited position within a narrative structure The organization of and clashes between many character spaces within a single narrative totality is essential to the novel's very achievement and concerns striking at issues central to narrative poetics the aesthetics of realism and the dynamics of literary representation Woloch's discussion of character space allows for a different history of the novel and a new definition of characterization itself By making the implied person indispensable to our understanding of literary form this book offers a forward looking avenue for contemporary narrative theory

Care, Control and COVID-19 Raili Marling, Marko Pajević, 2023-06-06 This volume sheds light on the social and cultural transformations that accompanied the Covid 19 crisis by looking at health and biopolitics from a philosophical and literary perspective The biopolitical measures taken globally in response to the crisis have led to previously unheard of restrictions in liberal societies resulting in deep and potentially lasting transformations both in social structures and interpersonal relationships Many researchers have addressed the Covid 19 crisis as a political or epidemiological challenge but few have paid sufficient attention to the culturally specific reactions and cultural representations of the human beings at the centre of events Literary analyses capture this human component and give insights into different reactions to and protests against the health political measures addressing the crisis This book puts the notion of biopolitics first extensively theorised in the 1970s to work in the context of the Covid 19 pandemic and uses literary case studies as starting points for discussions of contemporary politics media and legal and surveillance regimes It brings together eleven scholars from six countries with the shared aim of combining literary and philosophical expertise to create a better understanding of the changes in society and political attitudes induced by the ongoing pandemic Literature Laurie G.
