Teaching Language Literacy, 2010-01-01 In this era of mandated high stakes and standardized testing teachers and schools officials find themselves struggling to meet the demands for improved student achievement At the same time they are also expected to teach all subjects as required by national and state curriculum standards Because of these competing demands science is not even taught or taught less often in order to make more room for mathematics and language arts drill and practice and teaching to the test Anyone concerned with providing students with a well rounded education should ask whether these drastic measures even if they were to show improvement in achievement justify denying children access to the unique opportunities for intellectual growth and social awareness that the effective instruction of science provides Will these students have enough exposure to the science curriculum to prepare them to do well later in middle and high school How is this current situation going to help ameliorate the pervasive achievement gap in science and how is it going to motivate students to pursue science related careers The authors of this book believe that instead of sacrificing the science curriculum to make more time for drill and practice in mathematics and language arts what should be done is to connect current research on literacy and science instruction with effective pedagogy Therefore this volume provides fresh theoretical insights and practical applications for better understanding how science can be used as a pathway to teaching literacy and hence as a pathway to improving teachers practice and students learning CCSS and ELLs: Common Core State Standards and

Kaur, Shakila Abdul Manan, 2013 "We Dare Say Love" Na'ilah Suad Nasir, and Christopher P. Chatmon (eds.) Jarvis R. Givens, 2019-01-11 We Dare Say Love takes up the critically important issue of what it means to educate Black male students in a large urban district. It chronicles the development and implementation of the African American Male Achievement Initiative in Oakland Unified School District following a small group of Black male educators who changed district policy and practice to create a learning experience for Black boys rooted in love. The book takes readers inside the classrooms and inside the heads and hearts of program founders, leaders, and instructors to understand their pedagogy of care. It also elucidates the rituals, beliefs, and practices that created a classroom environment that held high expectations for the engagement and achievement of Black boys and provided a space for Black male students to blossom. This book offers an anti-deficit, anti-essentialist perspective of Black males' performance in schools and gives nuance to the stark realities that young men face: some thriving, some struggling, some making progress, others seeking a place to be recognized for their full human potential. From the Afterword by Tyrone C. Howard, professor of education, UCLA and author of Black Male: The Peril and Promise in the Education of African American Males. Chapters capture the multiple dimensions of collaborations and partnerships required for such systemic change, one of which is a fundamental wrestling with the metanarratives in the United States and elsewhere around the Black body and, in particular, the Black male. We can all learn revealing lessons of struggle and victory from the chapters of this volume. Carol D. Lee, Edwina S. Tarry, Professor of Education and Social Policy, Northwestern University.
