summarizes the information and knowledge of environmental microbiology in a single source. It details the natural fate of microorganisms in the environment as well as the intentional attempts to eliminate from the environment microorganisms that are pathogenic to humans or to plants and animals. The basic principles of environmental microbiology and general analytical methodologies common across the range of the environments covered are presented first. The core sections are structured with regard to the type of environmental medium being discussed. This landmark effort defines the study of environmental microbiology as we know it today and serves as an essential contribution to the literature. Recent advances in protein chemistry and in particular the application of new micromethods have led to fruitful advances in the understanding of basic cellular processes. Areas where protein chemical studies have resulted in interesting discoveries include the peptide hormones and their release factors, growth factors and oncogenes, bioenergetics, proton pumps and ion pumps and channels, topogenesis and protein secretion, molecular virology and immunology, membrane protein analysis and receptor research. In fact, the key methods are now on hand to unravel many of the major outstanding problems of molecular biology and in particular questions of fundamental interest which relate to developmental biology and specificity in cell-cell interaction. In this volume we have assembled descriptions of procedures which have recently been shown to be efficacious for the isolation, purification and chemical characterization of proteins and peptides that are only available in minute amounts. Emphasis is placed on well established micromethods which have been tested and found useful in many laboratories by experienced investigators. The chapters are written by specialists and describe a range of sensitive techniques which can be used by researchers working in laboratories with only modest resources and equipment Arizona Administrative Register, 2000
