Fleischhacker, D.J. Brooks, 2011-06-27 Substance related disorders pose an increasing challenge not only to the field of psychiatry but also to public health The rapid development of our society has also changed the face of substance use and abuse both quantitatively and qualitatively In this volume international experts present reviews of the latest research covering many areas ranging from neurobiology to psychological management as well as different drugs from alcohol to ecstasy Ageing and Dementia Kurt Jellinger, Reinhold Schmidt, Manfred Windisch, 2002-08-20 Epidemiological studies modern clinical neuroimaging neuropsychological molecular biological and genetic studies have considerably enhanced our knowledge about ageing processes of the human brain its sequelae diagnostic and therapeutic possibilities and limits In addition to Alzheimer s disease and other degenerative dementias the impact of cerebrovascular lesions and their risk factors in the pathogenesis of cognitive disorders of the aged are increasingly acknowledged and the recognition of mild cognitive impairment as a frequent initial stage of developing dementia is becoming an increasingly important diagnostic and therapeutic problem. The included papers were presented at the 7th International Symposium in Graz Sept 2001 and give a timely overview of the current and future concepts of pathogenesis, diagnosis and treatment strategies of pathological brain ageing and dementias, early recognition of mild cognitive impairment and future possibilities of prevention of dementing processes.

Neuropsychopharmacology W.W. Fleischhacker, D.J. Brooks, 2003-05-21. The 5th Neuropsychiatry Symposium of the European Institute of Health care was devoted to neuropsychopharmacology. As in previous meetings we sought to choose topics that bridge the gap between basic neuroscience and the clinical fields of neurology and psychiatry. Consequently the proceedings published in this supplement cover a lot of ground. Late breaking data on various neuromodulator and neurotransmitter systems and their implications for the treatment of a number of disorders are reviewed. Jean Charles Schwartz and colleagues set the stage with their paper on constitutive receptor activity using the histamine H3 receptor to illustrate the point. The role of neuropeptides and neurotrophins in psychiatric disorders is then reviewed by Florian Holsboer while Bill Deakin elucidates the role of serotonin discovered 50 years ago in the brain in select psychiatric syndromes. New pharmacological developments in the treatment of migraine, Parkinson's disease and schizophrenia are then presented by Hans Christoph Diener, Eduardo Tolosa and Wolfgang Fleischhacker. In the end David Nutt and colleagues provide future directions in substance dependence research linking the role of various transmitter systems with findings from neuroimaging studies. In summary there is no doubt that progress in the field of neuropsychopharmacology is exciting and the prospects of true advances in the treatment of brain disorders are very promising.
