New Horizons in Psychology Brian M. Foss,1966 New Horizons in Psychology 1 Brian M. Foss,1973 Without Good Reason Edward Stein,1996-01-11 Are humans rational Various experiments performed over the last several decades have been interpreted as showing that humans are irrational we make significant and consistent errors in logical reasoning probabilistic reasoning similarity judgements and risk assessment to name a few areas But can these experiments establish human irrationality or is it a conceptual truth that humans must be rational as various philosophers have argued In this book Edward Stein offers a clear critical account of this debate about rationality in philosophy and cognitive science He discusses concepts of rationality the pictures of rationality that the debate centres on and assesses the empirical evidence used to argue that humans are irrational He concludes that the question of human rationality must be answered not conceptually but empirically using the full resources of an advanced cognitive science Furthermore he extends this conclusion to argue that empirical considerations are also relevant to the theory of knowledge in other words that epistemology should be naturalized

Transcendental Phenomenological Psychology Jon L. James,2011-06 From the Preface to the Revised Edition Since its publication in 2007 Transcendental Phenomenological Psychology has been sold on every continent except Antarctica and is in the collections of research libraries in North America Europe and Asia Even so its presentation to the academic community rightly provoked many comments corrections suggestions and criticisms Such input while mostly welcome provided the impetus to publish a revised edition A phenomenological explanation of human consciousness has long been sought in regions of psychology since the discipline was first carved out of philosophical concepts and theories about the human condition. In its earliest years, Western psychology was faced with two possible directions for this explanation: an empirical naturalistic approach along with physics and biology or a non-empirical eidetic approach along with logic and mathematics. Edmund Husserl took up the latter. His phenomenological tradition of inquiry successfully spanned nearly forty years until suddenly stopped and largely suppressed during the Second World War. This book recovers Husserl's revolutionary approach toward the human sciences just as it was developed and just as it is presented for further study. Here the author systematically gathers what Husserl calls the leading clues in the phenomenological method proper for a psychology of affective inner experience and then for the first time applies Husserl's own methodology for introducing a phenomenological psychology in the transcendental register of human consciousness. Unlike contemporary phenomenological psychology in the existential register, transcendental phenomenological psychology is presented as an eidetic non-empirical act psychology in Husserl's mature genetic phenomenology. This novel approach takes in the full range of solipsistic and transcendental subjectivity in Husserl's theories of human consciousness and follows Husserl's lead in presenting phenomenological psychology as an applied geometry of intentional experience within a step-wise theory of inquiry. This book is unique in human science today not only in its presentation of the development and applications of Husserl's key concepts for the discipline of psychology but also for introducing a psychology that could be intuitively grasped as self-evidently valid wherever one's interest might lie.
