FIELD ADJUSTMENTS

PICK UP WINDGUARD

The wind guard, A, Figure 29, is designed to hold material against the pick up teeth to cause consistent and uniform movement of material into the header area. To accomplish this, the wind guard travel can be adjusted with stop blocks, A and B.

Normally the ends of the wind guard fingers should be 2" to 3" (51-76 mm) above the pick up speed. Stop both at block, B, raising the ends of the wind guard fingers from rubbing or bumping on the pickup guards. The fingers should partially compress the material, but not restrict flow to the header area. If flow of material is restricted, then move stop both, A, down to allow free flow of material. The bottom stop, A, controls upward movement of the wind guard. Under normal conditions the top of the wind guard should move in an arc of 4" to 8" (102-203 mm). If this stop is too low, then the hay may not be held against the pickup guards and air flow freely and uniformly to the header.

The pick-up wheel bracket can be adjusted by moving the bolt, C, Figure 29b, to any one of the four positions. For normal conditions it should be adjusted so the pick-up teeth clear the ground by 1"-2" (25-50 mm).

PICK UP FLOTATION SPRING

The pick-up flotation spring, A, Figure 30, carries most of the weight of the pick-up and provides a floating action. It should be adjusted using the pick-up flotation spring adjusting bolt, B, Figure 30, until there is 25-30 lbs. (11-13 kg) weight on the pick-up wheel. It is important that most of the weight of the pick-up be carried on the flotation spring to keep the load on the guide wheel to a minimum. This will reduce the wear on the pick-up wheel and prevent it from becoming damaged. However, the spring must not be tightened to the point where the pick-up will bounce up and over hay when baling light windrows.

Turn pick-up flotation spring adjusting bolt, B, shown in Figure 30, clockwise to increase spring tension. Turn bolt counter-clockwise to decrease tension.

BALE WEIGHT (Spring Tension)

The density of the material in the bales, and consequently the bale weight, is determined by the amount of tension applied to the tension rolls by means of the bale tension handles, A, Figure 31. Turning the handles clockwise increases the tension and consequently the weight of the bale being formed. Turning the handles counter-clockwise decreases the tension and the bale weight. Experience will teach the operator the correct adjustment needed to provide the desired bale weight for his individual baling conditions.
