ExpertConsult.com      Zoonosis Jacob Lorenzo-Morales, 2012-04-04 Zoonotic diseases are mainly caused by bacterial viral or parasitic agents although unconventional agents such as prions could also be involved in causing zoonotic diseases Many of the zoonotic diseases are a public health concern but also affect the production of food of animal origin thus they could cause problems in international trade of animal origin goods A major factor contributing to the emergence of new zoonotic pathogens in human populations is increased contact between humans and animals This book provides an insight on zoonosis and both authors and the editor hope that the work compiled in it would help to raise awareness and interest in this field It should also help researchers clinicians and other readers in their research and clinical usage      Hunter's Tropical

Promoting biophilia Jamie K. Reaser, Thomas H. Beery, Sean Southey , Hongying Li, 2025-06-25 Wild animals seem to be involved in the epidemiology of most zoonoses infectious diseases transmitted between people and other animals and serve as major reservoirs for the transmission of zoonotic agents to domestic animals and humans It s likely that the human animal has always been susceptible to infectious diseases originating in wildlife and these diseases play a driving role in the evolution of Homo sapiens Presently the large spatio temporal scale of environmental degradation coupled with the globalization of trade and travel create conditions that make zoonoses a major public health problem globally. Efforts to increase public awareness of the potential for wildlife to transmit zoonotic pathogens with high morbidity and mortality risk may instill or amplify fear of wildlife and the natural environment in general biophobia. For example, due to increased reporting of rare but potentially problematic zoonotic diseases associated with bats, bat biophobia has become a major threat to bat conservation. Fear drives people to kill bats and destroy their roost sites. There is a need to facilitate public awareness of zoonoses related issues while simultaneously promoting biophilia. This Research Topic will explore how zoonoses prevention efforts can consciously and actively promote biophilia, wildlife affinity and conservation rather than biophobia. Facilitating public biophilia is in and of itself a zoonotic disease prevention measure protecting and restoring natural ecosystems which can only happen when they are highly valued is the most fundamental upstream approach to preventing zoonotic spillover. We anticipate that Traditional Ecological Knowledge narrative storytelling, social marketing and other approaches to human behavior changes based on holistic approaches to human values needs alignment can offer insights and strategies for addressing this pressing complex problem at the interface of conservation and public health. We are particularly interested in papers that empirically investigate how zoonotic pathogen risk can be mitigated in conjunction with activities that instill biophilia toward zoonotic pathogen hosts. Papers will also be considered that present evaluate 1. Accounts of biophobic responses to zoonotic pathogen risk resulting in harm to wildlife host species. Include a section on lessons learned applicable to instilling host biophilia. 2. Case studies of specific initiatives promoting biophilia in the zoonotic risk mitigation context. Analyze project effectiveness from ecological and social perspectives. 3. Models for facilitating biophilia in the zoonotic risk mitigation context. Include guidance for testing applying these models. 4. Methods for developing effective social marketing campaigns and other approaches for instilling biophilia in the zoonoses risk mitigation context. Review the science that underpins the methods and distinguish between field tested and proposed methods. All papers should emphasize conservation goals outcomes. This Research Topic was developed in collaboration with the IUCN Commission on Education and Communication <https://www.iucn.org/our-union/commissions/commission-education-and-communication> and the International Alliance Against Health Risks in the Wildlife Trade <https://alliance.health.wildlife.org/>.
