1.3. Next paragraph is divided into two columns of the same width.

Emergency responders have powerful new options to deploy after disasters. Wireless operators are broadening their footprint and tagging markers that were previously unreachable through satellite back haul. And for consumers in particular, this is all good news as well. These days, regardless of proximity to major population centers, affordable broadband connectivity is within reach of everyone.

1.4. Next paragraph is divided into three columns with a column divider, the first column is narrower than the others.

While the future looks bright for HTS, a number of questions remain. We now need to draw on the experience of those doing it already to find the best way forward. The 5th High Throughput Satellite Conference serves as a forum where these trends, companies, and customers will provide insights into how the exciting new chapter in satellite communications is being written. Suffice it to say that HTS offers an exciting new the way for applications to be delivered in the world today. For example, new alternatives for airlines will provide faster, cheaper, and higher quality Internet to customers on long flights, just like announced just such a deal with Virgin.

1.5. Example of picture wrapping.

Coming back to HTS, like the earlier debut of Digital TV, there has similarly been an expectation that satellite broadband connectivity will be a "game-changer" offering for folks who have no terrestrial broadband service available. However, if you were to take to some of the satellite operators asking our consumer Q&A broader, you would discover there is a similar trend starting to play out as occurred for satellite broadcasting. The satellite and terrestrial industries will once again be in a pitched battle for hearts and minds of consumers everywhere.
