The terms for England's membership in the European Community have been agreed, and a similar understanding has been reached between the United States and the European Community's foreign and defense ministers. The agreement is expected to be signed by the end of the year.

The European Community is a group of 12 countries in Western Europe that have agreed to pool their resources and coordinate their policies in various areas, including trade, agriculture, and defense. The United States has been seeking to join the Community since the 1950s, but its application has been repeatedly deferred.

The new agreement is seen as a significant step towards the United States' long-standing goal of joining the Community. It is expected that the United States will be able to join the Community by the end of the year.
