The Monitor & Merrimac Story

Known as "Ironclads" because of their iron plate construction, these two ships and the battle they fought in the American Civil War signaled the end of the wooden war ship. On March 9, 1862, the two ironclad ships battled for four hours. Although neither side could claim victory, this famous conflict was the first time steam powered iron-plated ships had engaged in a sea battle. The Merrimac was later destroyed by fire to prevent being captured by the Union. The Monitor foundered in a gale while being towed and was lost at sea on December 31, 1862.
