Modernizing The Federal Government Paying For Performance Occasional Papers:

Modernizing the Federal Government Silvia Montoya, John D. Graham, 2008-01-02 In 2003 the Volcker Commission recommended that explicit pay for performance PFP systems be adopted more broadly throughout the federal government In this occasional paper the authors compare several proposals aimed at enhancing the role of such PFP schemes for federal civil servants and examine the pros and cons of PFP schemes compared with seniority based salary systems as well as the proposals to change the General Schedule system Modernizing the Federal Government Silvia Montoya, John David Graham, 2007 Enhancing the performance of the civil service has been a central objective of the United States since the Civil Service Reform Act of 1978 authorized a performance based component to federal salary structures In 2003 the National Commission on the Public Service also known as the Volcker Commission recommended that explicit pay for performance PFP systems be adopted more broadly throughout the federal government The authors compare several proposals aimed at enhancing the role of PFP in the federal government a White House proposal the Working for America Act which recommends that the entire federal workforce be converted to PFP systems by 2010 and three bills in the 110th Congress This occasional paper examines the advantages and pitfalls of explicit PFP schemes compared with the largely seniority based salary system that still covers more than half of federal civil servants The authors consider why using PFP in the public sector is challenging what can be learned from the social science literature recent practical experience and growing congressional opposition to PFP Rand web site Are Federal Workers Underpaid? United States.
