Economic Impact of Patents in a Knowledge-Based Market Economy - , The aim of this paper is therefore to identify the sources of persisting discrepancies and seek an alternative explanation of the principal functioning of the patent system which would better withstand the test of the reality of a modern knowledge based economy in which innovation based competition not monopoly prevails This is then the public good effect of a patent by which cumulative research is explicitly allowed indeed promoted so that innovators can stand on the shoulders of the giants who precede them as Scotchmer would say 18 The public good effect of patents then obviously opens the way for innovation based competition to take place provided however that the pro competitive nature of the public g The following remark by Cornish is a representative case in point For instance in an internal combustion engine the idea of putting a cushion of air in the cylinder between the fuel and the piston in order to cushion the explosive effect of ignition was said not in itself to be patentable but a machine devised to do so was 30 Much the same reasoning was expressed in the U Despite this indeed laconic overly simplified and incomplete presentation of the basic principles it is not difficult to see that the scope of patent protection is itself limited by the law to the extent that the primary benefit of the public good effect of patents is not adversely affected The above exposition of the competitive framework of patents and their optimal scope is an extremely simple model the value of which rests primarily on the originality of the underlying assumptions and not on its sophistication Patents Marc Baudry,Béatrice

Dumont,2017-10-30 The patent system is criticized today by some practitioners and economists In fact there is a partial disconnection between patent demographics and productivity gains but also the development of actors who do not innovate and who develop business models that their detractors equate with a capture of annuities or a dangerous commodification of patents This book provides a less Manichaeian view of the position of patents in the system of contemporary innovation It first recalls that these criticisms are not new before arguing that if these criticisms have been revived it is because of a partial shift from an integrated innovation system to a much more fragmented and open system This shift accompanied the promotion of a more competitive economy The authors show that this movement is coherent with a more intensive use of patents but also one that is more focused on their signal function than on their function of direct monetary incentive to innovation

Applied Evolutionary Economics and the Knowledge-based Economy Andreas Pyka, Horst Hanusch, 2006-01-01

Blocking Patents in European Competition Law Angelika S. Murer, 2021-12-03

In practice and jurisprudence in European competition law it is especially difficult to define the boundaries of patent abuse as an offence In this thoroughly researched book the author answers the question of when and how an application for a blocking patent can amount to an abuse of a dominant position under Article 102 TFEU Drawing on legal literature and European Union EU case law the presentation analyses a constellation of blocking patenting strategies and proposes potential remedies where abuse is involved With detailed descriptions of the characteristics of potentially abusive and non abusive behaviour regarding applications for blocking patents the book provides the following and more a comprehensive analysis of the case law of the EU courts on the abuse of a dominant position in cases which involve intellectual property rights insights on how patenting strategies affect competition with a particular focus on the application of blocking patents an overview of the developments in doctrine and practice which led to the current understanding of the seemingly conflictual goals of competition and intellectual property law and insights on the difficulties of defining relevant markets and establishing whether an undertaking holds a dominant position The book illustrates the mechanisms of blocking patenting strategies with examples from the pharmaceutical industry because blocking strategies have particular relevance in applying for patents in that context A test scheme for analysing the application of a blocking patent under Article 102 TFEU is included Additionally the book provides an outlook on the topic of patents and shortages of supply in light of the COVID pandemic Practitioners and policymakers requiring an understanding of the conceptual framework of the abuse concept within EU competition law and how it relates to patent strategies will welcome this invaluable book They will not only be able to set the conduct of applying for blocking patents into the Article 102 TFEU context but also have decisive tools to approach questions on the intersection of patent law and competition law in the EU

The Global Governance of Knowledge Peter Drahos, 2010-01-28 Patent offices around the world have granted millions of patents to multinational companies Patent offices are rarely studied and yet they are crucial agents in the global knowledge economy Based on a study of forty five rich and poor countries that takes in the world s largest and smallest offices Peter Drahos argues that patent offices have become part of a globally integrated private governance network which serves the interests of multinational companies and that the Trilateral Offices of Europe the USA and Japan make developing country patent offices part of the network through the strategic fostering of technocratic trust By analysing the obligations of patent offices under the patent social contract and drawing on a theory of nodal governance the author proposes innovative approaches to patent office administration that would allow developed and developing countries to recapture the public spirit of the patent social contract

Patent Reform United States. Congress. Senate. Committee on the Judiciary, 2007 Progress Towards the Knowledge Driven Economy Great Britain. Parliament. House of Commons. Trade and Industry Committee, 2005 The 1998 White Paper Our competitive future building the knowledge based economy CM 4176 ISBN 0101417624 proposed a ten year programme to enable the UK to close the productivity gap by exploiting the potential benefits of a modern knowledge driven economy More than six years on this report is a review of the progress that has been made The topics covered include UK performance since 1998 the development of new products processes and services science and knowledge research bases knowledge transfer and exploitation information and communication technologies competition from low cost economies One of the conclusions is that although the UK s science and knowledge research bases and businesses are collaborating more frequently the performance in knowledge exploitation has been disappointing and the relative position of the UK against the rest of the G7 has remained unchanged Another conclusion is that although there is some evidence that outsourcing abroad can be beneficial the Government should keep the trend under review in case there are strategic losses
