The Nervous System

The nervous system is an extremely complex, highly intricate, and very sensitive structure that regulates everything that happens throughout the human body. The main purpose of all the nervous system and its various parts is to carry out the information and give the body the response to stimuli. The nervous system is divided into two main parts: the central nervous system (CNS) and the peripheral nervous system (PNS).

Central Nervous System

The central nervous system, or CNS, is the part of the nervous system that is located in the brain and spinal cord. It is the most complex part of the nervous system. The brain is the control center of the body and is located within the protective hard skull. Layers of meningeal membranes and cerebrospinal fluid also protect the CNS. The spinal cord extends from the brain through the vertebral column. It has an S-shaped curve to the spinal cord, and a part of the spinal cord, called the cauda equina, extends from the lower back into the body.

Peripheral Nervous System

There are all parts of the nervous system that are not the CNS, and they make up the peripheral nervous system (PNS). The PNS is made up of sensory neurons that are capable of receiving stimuli, and motor neurons that are capable of responding to stimuli. For example, sensory neurons in the eye and ear detect light and sound, and motor neurons are involved in muscles that contract and relax.

The PNS is divided into the somatic and autonomic nervous systems. The somatic nervous system is responsible for the voluntary control of the body's movements. The autonomic nervous system is responsible for the involuntary control of the body's functions. The autonomic nervous system is divided into the sympathetic and parasympathetic systems. The sympathetic system is responsible for the "fight or flight" response, and the parasympathetic system is responsible for the "rest and digest" response. The sympathetic system is active when the body is under stress, while the parasympathetic system is active when the body is at rest.

The Brain

The brain is the most complex part of the nervous system. It is located in the head and is the control center of the body. It is made up of billions of neurons that are capable of receiving and responding to stimuli. The brain is divided into three main parts: the cerebrum, cerebellum, and brainstem. The cerebrum is the largest part of the brain and is responsible for the majority of the body's functions. The cerebellum is located at the back of the brain and is responsible for coordination and balance. The brainstem is located at the base of the brain and is responsible for the body's basic functions, such as breathing and heart rate.
