

Hardware Overview of the FAS2040 System

FAS2040 rear

Shutting down a controller module

Shut down the target controller module (called a "node" in an active/active configuration) by completing the applicable procedure:

If you have an active/active configuration

1. Check the status of the target node by entering the following command at the system console of either node:
`nt -l status`
2. Take one of the following actions, depending on the result of the `nt -l status` command:
 - If clustering is enabled and neither node is in takeover mode, go to step 3.
 - If clustering is enabled and the partner node took over the target node, go to "Opening the System."
 - If clustering is enabled and the target node took over the partner node, correct the problem, run the `nt -l status` command from the target node console, and go to step 1.
3. Take over the target node by entering the following command from the partner node's console:
`go takeover -nt -l takeover`
4. Go to "Opening the system" when the takeover is complete.

If you have a single-controller configuration

1. Enter the following command from the system console: `halt`.
2. Turn off the power supplies and unplug both power cords from the power source.
3. Check the nonvolatile memory (NVMe) LED:
 - If the LED is not flashing, go to "Opening the System."
 - If the LED is flashing, there is content in the NVMe that has not been saved to disk. Reconnect the power supplies to the power source, reboot the controller module, and repeat Steps 1 through 3. If repeated attempts to cleanly shut down the controller module fail, be aware that you might lose any data that was not saved to disk. Go to "Opening the System."

Opening the system

1. Properly ground yourself.
2. Loosen the thumb screw on the controller module cam handle.
3. Unplug system cables from the controller module, as needed.
4. Remove the cable management arms by unscrewing them from the cam handle.
5. Put the controller module cam handle (downward) and slide the controller module out of the system. Make sure that you support the bottom of the controller module with your free hand.
6. Remove the controller module cover by completing the following substeps, using the illustration for reference:
 - a. Loosen the thumb screw on the back of the controller module.
 - b. Gently press the heel of your hand on the indentation on the controller module cover closest to the cam handle, then slide the cover toward the back of the controller module.
 - c. Lift the cover straight up off the controller module.

Removing the cable management arms

FAS2040 front

Important:

For hot-swappable FRUs:

Always consult <http://www.netapp.com> for current field-replaceable unit (FRU) replacement procedures.

Adding external storage or using FC:

You must order and use SFP modules on your system, if you are connecting external FC storage devices or using FC with the system.

Important:

For hot-swappable power supplies:

System shuts down two minutes after you remove a power supply.

Attention: Disk drives are fragile. Do not handle them except when replacing failed disk drives or moving them to a new chassis.

Closing the system

1. Align the controller module cover with the notches on the sides of the controller module, then slide the cover down and forward to seat it.
2. Align the end of the controller module with the opening in the chassis.
3. Gently push the controller module halfway into the chassis and reseat the controller module, then push the controller module all the way into the chassis.

Results: For systems in an active/active configuration, the node reboots as soon as you seat the controller completely into the chassis.

4. Firmly push up the cam handle to finish seating the controller module in the system, and then push the cam handle to the closed position and tighten the thumb screw beneath the cam handle.
5. Reattach the cable management arms by screwing them into the holes in the cam handle.
6. Complete the boot process.
 - If your system has a single controller module, plug in the power supply and turn on the power.
 - If your system is in an active/active configuration, give back the node by completing the following substeps:
 - a. Enter the following command from the partner console: `nt -l reboot`
 - b. On the console of the newly installed controller module, select Normal Boot (option 1) from the displayed menu to boot Data ONTAP.
