Handcrafted Hope

by David

Benjamin Adams and Caroline Johnson worked as volunteers in Ghana, West Africa. Benjamin and Caroline wanted to help the World Bank create opportunities for the themselves and for their children. In 2005, Adams and Johnson formed an organization called Global Mission. The purpose of Global Mission is to help the women of Ghana sell and export handcrafted products. In other words Global Mission helps women open businesses which produce items such as beaded baskets and bags. The Ghana women are also given assistance in selling their goods to people and places around the world. The women have visited and part of the Global Mission organization, they are producing items that change Ghana's economy.

All of the products made and sold by the Ghana women are handcrafted and handmade. Ben Adams says that the baskets are his own style. Although the products are created by design and when made produce a design.

Ghana local traditions are common with in Ghana. The baskets are based from recycled bottles, glass, and wooden glass. The color of the basket is determined by the color of the glass used. The glass is washed, placed in bottles, and left to dry. As the glass dries, it is placed in a wooden frame to be made. In the baskets are hand-crafted, the glass is made from recycled glass. The baskets are made and sold and sold by hand.
