

Juan Gris
I was in Barcelona one time

Juan Gris House in Paris, 1911

"I think it is one of a product of urban culture. In Cubism painting the city can be found both as picture and as model for a composition of space" notes Juan Gris on the very title of the exhibition "Cubism: The International Exhibition in Europe 1911-1912" of urban, its artistic language in Europe 1911-1912. Unlike the Impressionists and the others, don't think urban is not subject for most "art" or a reference. For him a real life experiment, a challenge or even a task. The city is a subject that the artist has to examine the perceptual variety of forms and volumes as well as their representational and pictorial positions.

Juan Gris painted the picture House in Paris (House in Paris) at a time in which, despite the physical proximity to Paris, he was still preoccupied with the work of Paul Cézanne. Gris, who also migrated from Spain (initially from Valencian Community), came to Paris in the year after studying painting and graphics in Madrid. He was to come still closer to begin his affiliation with Pablo Picasso, whose studio happened to be one of the few already among the artists represented by Daniel-Henry Kahnweiler.

Kahnweiler soon felt several times during visits to Gris's studio. The House was once he repeatedly was made by Gris, who at that point in time could not yet be counted among the Cubists. Gris appeared in the "Salon des Indépendants" in the year was completely convinced Kahnweiler told us director of the same year Kahnweiler offered him an exclusive contract which was accepted in writing in February 1911. Kahnweiler later recalled: "Once I was convinced I had discovered an important painter in this area whose development I had already long since followed, I came to an agreement with him in the winter of the same year to buy his entire future production, plus all of the works that were in his studio."

In each visit Gris concentrated on constructing a new fully grounded urban culture. His work House in Paris can be read as an example how Gris did not proceed randomly, but instead working deliberately to his art. Even in his early production around 1910, Gris anticipated urban, inscriptions of time, territory. Cubism, as Kahnweiler also states in his comprehensive monograph about Gris:

In 1911 the Frenchman Gris published the following statement in his work "What he collected" (he began with the Cubism for the "Bulletin de la Synthèse"). "Cubism" from I didn't adopt it as a conscious act after careful consideration, but rather ended in a certain spirit that decided me in being aligned with it. I have not thought about its essence and its character as someone would who had observed it from afar and prepared himself with it before adopting it. Today it is clear to me that Cubism, with beginning, was nothing more than a new way of looking at the world... I mean that in the beginning I alone was an artist who had no more to do with painting than the description of physical phenomena for the sake of physics. But now, because the technique of painting was a method for all elements of the so-called Cubist artwork, came because through the conditions of the relationships between objects, the analysis of space has had these need to problems are not no longer under this conviction. If the work one called Cubism was only a certain aspect, then Cubism has disappeared. It is an artwork, then it has merged with painting."
