

on urban domestic gardens in developing countries (pp. 123–138), and the other by Ignatieva on the globalisation of ‘plant material’ (pp. 139–151). In reality, both of these papers are focused only on domestic gardens. Yet, these papers do make some contribution on the role of biodiversity within urban ecology. For example, Ignatieva completes her chapter by charging Western countries with the role of ‘offering a new vision to planting design that demonstrates ecological responsibility and integrity’. Chapters in other sections of the book also discuss biodiversity. For example, Rink and Herbst (p. 91) advocate that lands commonly termed ‘derelict land’, ‘brownfields’, ‘vacant land’, ‘neglected land’ or ‘abandoned land’ contribute to ‘urban wilderness’ and could play a role as an additional form of protected area that could be used to test new management approaches to conservation. One of the few occasions where non-human animals are given more than a passing mention is in the very informative chapter by Wu et al. on spatio-temporal patterns and ecological effects of urbanisation.

This edited book is an excellent volume on ‘human ecology’ within an urban setting: a book of ‘urban human ecology’. As such it makes a major contribution to this area of study. Nevertheless, as Alberti et al. [1] point out, typically ecological processes and human beings are studied as separate phenomena and, as such the interactions between the two within urban ecosystems are largely ignored. This book has clearly attempted to bridge this gap. While certainly excelling in the human domain, with informative chapters, for example, on ecological threats in Indian mega-cities, multi-scale flood risk assessment and ‘radical political ecology’ of water, the anthropocentric approach to biodiversity falls short of the mark means that this book falls short of the mark.

Eradicating ecocide: exposing the corporate and political practices destroying the planet and proposing the laws needed to eradicate ecocide, edited by Polly Higgins, Shephard-Walwyn Publisher, London, 2010, ix–202, £17.95, pbk (ISBN 978-0856832758).

Earth is our business. Changing the rule of game, edited by Polly Higgins, Shephard-Walwyn Publisher, London, 2012, ix–200, £14.95, pbk (ISBN 978-0856832888).

Polly Higgins, an international lawyer, advocates a new and extended body of international and universal law of the earth. She has presented us with two successive books that are angry, committed – and intellectually lucid. Higgins was invited to speak on this at a UN conference on Climate Change in 2008, just after Ecuador had voted by referendum to include in their new Constitution a Bill of Rights of Nature, and Bolivia subsequently adopted a Universal Declaration. Higgins developed and named it the Universal Declaration

Online Eradicating Ecocide Corporate Political Destroying:

Eradicating Ecocide Polly Higgins, 2010-12-01 In Eradicating Ecocide international environment lawyer and activist Polly Higgins sets out to demonstrate in no uncertain terms how our planet is fast being destroyed by the activities of corporations and governments facilitated by compromise laws that offer insufficient deterrence. She offers a solution that is radical but as she explains absolutely necessary. The recent Mexican Gulf oil spill is a compelling reminder of the consequences of unchecked ecocide. Higgins advocates the introduction of a new international law against Ecocide. It would become the 5th Crime Against Peace and would hold to account heads of corporate bodies that are found guilty of perpetrating ecocide. The opportunity to implement this law represents a crossroads in the fate of humanity: we can accept this one change and in doing so save our ecosystem for future generations, or we can continue to destroy it, risking future brutal war over disappearing natural resources. This is the first book to explain that we all have a commanding voice and the power to call upon all our governments to change the existing rules of the game. Higgins presents examples of laws in other countries which have succeeded in curtailing the power of governments, corporations, and banks, and made a sudden and effective change, demonstrating that her proposal is not impossible. Eradicating Ecocide is a crash course on what laws work, what doesn't, and what else is needed to prevent the imminent disaster of global collapse. Eradicating Ecocide provides a comprehensive overview of what needs to be done in order to prevent ecocide. It is a book providing a template of a body of laws for all governments to implement, which applies equally to smaller communities and anyone who is involved in decision making.

Cleaning Up Greenwash Angus Nurse, 2022-02-25 A 2022 Choice Reviews Outstanding Academic Title. Through a green criminological perspective, Angus Nurse examines the contemporary reality of corporate environmental crime and illegal activities that have become normalized within many major corporations. Arguably, this is an inevitable consequence of a corporate culture that prioritizes profits and the smooth operation of market activities over environmental concerns, coupled with the increased political power of major corporations that can act almost with impunity and where problems do occur can literally buy itself out of trouble. These same corporations are broadly perceived as being responsible actors. However, Nurse argues that corporate environmental offending is often deliberate and that corporations understand that they will often be allowed to continue with polluting and non-compliant behavior because the likely enforcement responses are fines and settlements rather than criminal prosecution. Using several case studies, Nurse explores biopiracy and the rights of indigenous peoples, the behavior of oil companies in African states, the regulation of corporate social responsibility, and corporate environmental responsibility, an analysis of contemporary environmental legislation, and the prosecution of environmental harm and state corporate crime and air pollution. Dealing with these problems requires a wider notion of crime and wrongdoing that directly engages with the types of environmental offending that represent a threat to human populations and non-human nature, irrespective of whether these are defined as crime by justice systems. Law, Fiction and Activism in a Time of Climate Change Nicole Rogers, 2019-08-14 The book examines the narratives of climate change which have developed and which are currently evolving in three areas law fiction and activism Narratives of climate change generated by litigants judges writers of fiction and activists are having and will have a profound effect on the way we respond to the climate change crisis Acknowledging the prevalence of unreliable narrators this book explores the reliability and significance of different forms of climate narrative The author analyses overlapping themes and points of intersection considering the recurrent motif of the trickster the prominence of the child the significance and ongoing viability of the rights discourse and the increasingly prevalent emergency framing with its multiple implications for law's empire She asks how law fiction and activism measure up as textual and performative fora for telling the story of climate change and anticipating a climate changed future And in addition how can they help foster transformative narratives which empower us to confront the climate change crisis This highly topical cross disciplinary work will be of interest to anyone concerned about the growing climate emergency and makes a valuable contribution to climate law environmental law the environmental humanities and ecocriticism
