The Interdependence of the Convention on the Rights of the Child Naomi Lott, 2025-07-01 The book critically engages with the right to play and other Convention rights to explore their interdependence and interconnectivity The book brings together experts across various children's rights topics and invites them to consider the intersections of their work with the child's right to play It furthers the understanding and implementation of the right to play as this novel area of research develops The book demonstrates both the interdependence of the rights within the Convention and the unique and critical role of the right to play in achieving the aims of the Convention and the rights therein It also extends the theoretical methodological and critical scope of the discipline by considering children's rights in this interdependent manner. The contributions to this edited collection explore the role of the right to play in meeting obligations pertaining to the digital environment, identity rights, education, climate change, and environmental health, refugees, girls' rights, social protection, healthcare, and disability, and vice versa. By drawing together original and creative approaches to a number of pressing social questions and issues relating to human rights, this book has tangible application for developing both the content of the right to play and the potentials of this right for the wider child rights project. Furthermore, this book is pioneering in the field of children's rights in two key ways. Not only does it serve to contribute to filling a significant gap in the literature on the right to play, but it also stands as a crucial example of interdisciplinary legal research. Such an approach is critical for the field of children's rights due to the nature of childhood and the multidisciplinary relevance of children's rights and children's issues. This book thus serves as an example to push the field to be more contextual and interdisciplinary.

Time, Globalization and Human Experience Paul Huebener, Susie O'Brien, Tony Porter, Liam Stockdale, Yanqiu Rachel Zhou, 2016-11-03. This edited volume focuses on the intersection of time and globalization as manifested across a variety of economic, political, cultural, and environmental contexts. Since David Harvey's influential characterization of globalization as time-space compression, ample research has looked at the spatial aspect of the phenomenon, yet few have focused on globalization's temporal aspects. Meanwhile, other publications have analysed problems of speed, acceleration, and the commodification of time, but while it often serves as the implicit or explicit backdrop for these studies, time and globalization is not investigated as a problem or a question in its own right. In response, this volume develops these conversations to consider how time shapes globalization and how globalization affects our experience of time. The interplay between varying aspects of the human experiences of time and globalization requires the type of interdisciplinary approach that this volume takes. The contributors advance an understanding of global time as an arena of contestation with social, political, ecological, and cultural implications for human and other lives. In considering the diverse valences of time and globalization, they illuminate problems as well as possibilities. Topics covered include emerging infectious diseases, temporal sovereignty, worker exploitation and resistance, chronobiology, energy politics, activism, and hope, and literary and cinematic representations of counter temporalities, offering a rich and varied account of global times. This volume will be of great interest to students and researchers from a range of disciplines including anthropology, cultural studies, globalization, international relations, literary studies, political science, social theory, and sociology.
