

Jacking and vehicle support

The jack supplied with the vehicle tool kit should only be used for changing the roadwheels - see "Wheel changing" later in this Section. When carrying out any other kind of work, raise the vehicle using a hydraulic jack, and always supplement the jack with axle stands positioned under the vehicle jacking points (see illustrations).

When using a hydraulic jack or axle stands, always position the jack head or axle stand head under one of the relevant jacking points.

To raise the front of the vehicle, position the jack with an interposed block of wood underneath the front section of the sill. Do not jack the vehicle under the sump or any of the steering or suspension components. To raise the rear of the vehicle, position the jack head underneath the rear section of the sill. Do not attempt to raise the vehicle with the jack positioned under the suspension components.

The jack supplied with the vehicle, located in the jacking points in the ridge on the underside of the sill. Ensure that the jack head is correctly engaged before attempting to raise the vehicle (see illustration).

Never work under, around, or near a raised vehicle, unless it is adequately supported in at least two places.
