

Palm Oil Remains Competitive - Holding 65 Percent Import Share in Bangladesh Market.

Part 1 of 2

In 2014, import of palm oil (CPL, FBD (CPL), together), reached to a highest ever record quantity of 1.27 million tonnes. The upward trend in the import of total oil and fats also continued in 2014 like previous years, which also reached to a record quantity of 1.85 million tonnes registering a growth of 9.50% compared to 2013 and of this volume, palm oil comprised 65% import share to total oil and fats in Bangladesh in 2014.

As the indigenous production of oil and fats has remained almost stagnant since 2000 and can meet only about 10% of the demand, import of oil and fats is becoming ever more crucial which need to keep pace with the increasing demand. The driving forces behind increase in demand for oil and fats are population growth, economic development, increase in purchasing power associated with economic development and urbanisation. Bangladesh is a densely populated country with a population of 135.8 million living in an area of 147,570 sq. km. The population is growing at 1.32% each year. Hence a small increase in per capita consumption of oil and fats translates into a large increase in total demand for the whole country, which is happening each year.

Bangladesh is a developing country and has a rapidly growing market based economy. Despite political infighting and poor governance, the country's economy is progressing at a steady pace. Its per capita GDP is US$ 1,115 and per capita CMI is US$ 1,190. The GDP growth in 2013-14 was 8.12%. The country had been able to maintain above 4% GDP growth for last five years. Good remittance from Bangladeshis expatriates working abroad and good price for agriculture commodities have contributed to increase the purchasing power of the rural people, which constitutes about 70% of the total population, leading to higher consumption of oil and fats.

Oil and Fats Scenario

Bangladesh is heavily dependent on import to meet its oil and fats requirements. Indigenous production of oil and fats is quite insufficient and could fulfil about 10% of its demand. Oil and fats requirement of the country has now climbed up to 1.85 million tonnes while local production is about 0.18 million tonnes. Palm, soybean and canola/mustard oils are the 3 major edible oils consumed in this country. Mustard oil is the traditional edible oil, which is consumed in virgin form. But its use is limited due to its higher price and lower production in the country. Some quantity of canola and mustard seed are imported to fill the gap between demand and domestic production. Imported canola/mustard seed is crushed locally and the oil obtained is marketed in virgin form.

Palm oil is imported in both crude and refined form. Crude palm olein (CPL) is refined in local refineries and the refined olein thus obtained is marketed. The imported refined palm oil (RBD PO) and refined palm olein (RBD PL) is imported as the national oil company/buying agency although some portion of the same is also marketed as super olein through fractionating the oil locally.

Soybean oil is imported in crude form which is refined locally and the refined soybean oil is marketed thereafter. Some quantity of soybean is also imported which is crushed locally and crude soybean oil obtained is refined to marketing. Vanaspathi/honing and Butter/Ghee are the major edible fats. Coconut oil and linseed oil are used for medicine purposes. Edible oil and fat
