KEYWORDS

- Classification • Epidemiology • Incidence • Mild cognitive impairment • Prevalence • Risk factors

KEY POINTS

- The prevalence and incidence of mild cognitive impairment (MCI) is high among elderly persons.
- Persons with MCI have a high risk of progression to dementia.
- Several risk factors for MCI are potentially modifiable and amenable to interventions to reduce risk.
- Persons with MCI have a higher mortality than cognitively normal persons.
- Persons with MCI who revert to normal cognition have an increased risk of developing MCI or dementia at a later date.

INTRODUCTION

Mild cognitive impairment (MCI) is the widely used term that describes an intermediate stage from normal cognitive function to dementia. The concept of MCI is highly significant and important to the field of aging and dementia for several reasons. Subjects with MCI have a high rate of progression to dementia over a relatively short period. Even among subjects who revert to normal cognition, the rate of subsequent MCI or dementia is higher than among those who never develop MCI. Research related to MCI provides insights into disease mechanisms in the prodementia stage of disease.

Clinical Epidemiology Noel S. Weiss, 2006 Examining the principles and methods of research on the evaluation of factors affecting the outcome of illness this volume emphasizes diagnostic and therapeutic interventions the factors most readily modified by health care providers The author discusses various ways of structuring observations on patient groups and appraises the nature and strength of inferences drawn from those observations Weiss also demonstrates how the results of this type of research clinical epidemiologic research can be incorporated into the decision making process utilized in clinical medicine Among other changes this new edition of Clinical Epidemiology greatly expands the chapter on randomized controlled trials and includes a whole new chapter on meta analysis authored by Peter Cummings with Noel S Weiss Meta analysis the statistical synthesis of data from comparable studies was unheard of thirty years ago but with the advent of increased computer technology the method has been steadily growing in importance in the interpretation of the results of patient oriented medical research
