Eisenhower Vetoes Farm Bill With Disappointment, Regret

Demo Precinct Sessions Set May 5

The House of Representatives today voted to veto President Dwight D. Eisenhower's farm bill, a move that drew sharp criticism from farm leaders and many members of Congress.

The bill, which would have provided for a 10-year period of price supports for farm products, was vetoed by a vote of 277 to 161.

President Eisenhower said in his veto message that the bill was "not in the best interests of the American people."

Announces 4 Immediate Steps To Improve Current Income

The Federal Reserve Board today announced four immediate steps to improve the current income of the American people.

The steps include a reduction in the reserve requirements for banks, a change in the discount rate, and two other measures.

The board said that these steps were necessary to stimulate the economy and to help the American people.

The board also said that it would continue to monitor the economy and make further adjustments as needed.

The board's actions were seen as a significant move to help the economy, especially in light of the recent recession.

The board's actions were also seen as a signal that the economy was beginning to show signs of improvement.
